Cisco Conducting Forensic Analysis & Incident Response Using Cisco Technologies for CyberOps Sample Questions (Q80-Q85):

NEW QUESTION # 80

A threat actor attempts to avoid detection by turning data into a code that shifts numbers to the right four times. Which anti-forensics technique is being used?

- A. obfuscation
- B. encryption
- C. poisoning
- D. tunneling

Answer: A

Explanation:

This scenario describes a substitution cipher, where data is made unreadable or less recognizable without altering its functionality. According to the Cisco CyberOps Associate guide, obfuscation includes techniques such as shifting, encoding, and symbol manipulation to mask the true nature of data or code:

"A very well-known cipher, the Caesar cipher... shifts the letter of the alphabet by a fixed number... This technique is a form of data obfuscation used to bypass detection mechanisms."

NEW QUESTION # 81

An investigator is analyzing an attack in which malicious files were loaded on the network and were undetected. Several of the images received during the attack include repetitive patterns. Which anti-forensic technique was used?

- A. obfuscation
- B. steganography
- C. spoofing
- D. tunneling

Answer: B

What is the IOC threat and URL in this STIX JSON snippet?

- A. malware;
'http://x4z9arb.cn/4712/'
- B. malware; malware--162d917e-766f-4611-b5d6-652791454fca
- C. stix;
'http://x4z9arb.cn/4712/'
- D. malware; x4z9arb backdoor
- E. x4z9arb backdoor;http://x4z9arb.cn/4712/

Answer: A

Explanation:

This STIX (Structured Threat Information eXpression) JSON snippet provides two key elements relevant for IOC (Indicator of Compromise) analysis:

* The indicator pattern shows a suspicious URL.#

"pattern": "[url:value = 'http://x4z9rb.cn/4712/']"

This is the actual IOC that can be used for detection.

* The type of object that the indicator relates to# "type": "malware"# "name": "x4z9arb backdoor" This indicates the nature of the threat associated with the IOC is malware.

Therefore,

the threat is "malware" and the associated indicator (IOC) is the URL: http://x4z9rb.cn/4712/ Option A correctly captures both the IOC category ("malware") and the indicator value ("http://x4z9rb.cn/4712/").

NEW QUESTION # 84

An engineer is analyzing a ticket for an unexpected server shutdown and discovers that the web-server ran out of useable memory and crashed.

Which data is needed for further investigation?

- A. /var/log/httpd/messages.log
- B. /var/log/httpd/access.log
- C. /var/log/messages.log
- D. /var/log/access.log

Answer: C

Explanation:

The most relevant log for system-level events such as memory exhaustion and shutdown is /var/log/messages.log, which contains kernel and service-level logs including OOM (Out-Of-Memory) events.

As detailed in Linux investigations:

"Logs located in /var/log/messages provide critical system error reporting including shutdowns, memory errors, and service failures".
