IBM watsonx Generative AI Engineer - Associate Sample Questions (Q25-Q30):

NEW QUESTION # 25

In IBM Watsonx Generative AI, top-p sampling (nucleus sampling) is a parameter that influences the decoding process. Which of the following best describes how the top-p parameter works during response generation?

- A. Top-p sampling ensures that only the top 1% most probable tokens are chosen, regardless of context.
- B. Top-p sampling selects the next token only from a fixed number of top tokens, ensuring the most predictable outcome.
- C. Top-p sampling adjusts the probability threshold dynamically, allowing the model to sample tokens until the cumulative probability reaches p.
- D. Top-p sampling prioritizes tokens based on their frequency in the training dataset, ignoring their conditional probabilities.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 26

Your company is working on deploying a Watsonx Generative AI model for a client, and you have been asked to define the roles involved in the deployment process.

Which of the following roles is responsible for ensuring that the model is properly integrated into the client's existing systems and that data pipelines are established for continuous model improvement?

- A. Data Scientist
- B. Data Engineer
- C. DevOps Engineer
- D. Solution Architect

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 27

A business is implementing a RAG solution to enhance its chatbot capabilities. The chatbot needs to answer queries using a large collection of unstructured documents.

Which scenario best highlights when to use a vector database to augment this system?

- A. When working with large amounts of unstructured text data, to enable semantic search through embeddings that represent the meaning of documents.
- B. When storing highly structured relational data, as a vector database excels at managing tabular information efficiently.
- C. When you need to provide answers based on the keywords present in the documents, as vector databases are designed for keyword-based retrieval.
- D. When performing traditional database operations like sorting and filtering based on numeric or categorical values.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 28

In a scenario where a large language model (LLM) is integrated into a customer support application, the model is designed to retrieve relevant product information to answer complex user queries. The dataset consists of diverse product documents, including PDFs, user manuals, and website pages.

Which of the following best describes when to use a vector database as part of the Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) approach?

- A. When there is a requirement to process large volumes of streaming data in real-time, and exact matching is the priority.
- B. When there is a need to perform efficient keyword-based search on highly structured documents.
- C. When the data consists of diverse unstructured documents, and you need to retrieve semantically similar content using dense vector representations.
- D. When the dataset consists mainly of structured tabular data and relational queries.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 29

Which of the following statements accurately describes a drawback of using soft prompts in generative AI model optimization?

- A. Soft prompts require additional computational resources during training, which can limit their scalability in real-time applications.
- B. Soft prompts can increase the model's interpretability by providing clear, user-defined input instructions.
- C. Soft prompts make it easier to control the model's behavior as the prompts are flexible and can be adjusted by the user during inference.
- D. Soft prompts offer improved performance for specific tasks but are harder to implement when fine-tuning models across multiple domains.

Answer: A
