- B. BPaaS
- C. PaaS
- D. IaaS

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 572

Which of the following allows for the management of network policies from a central portal while maintaining a hardware-agnostic approach?

- A. Direct Connect
- B. Virtual private network
- C. Load balancing
- D. Software-defined network

Answer: D

Explanation:

A software-defined network (SDN) is a network architecture that allows for the management of network policies from a central portal while maintaining a hardware-agnostic approach. SDN separates the control plane, which is responsible for making decisions about how to route traffic, from the data plane, which is responsible for forwarding traffic based on the control plane's instructions. SDN enables network administrators to configure, monitor, and manage network devices and services using a software application, regardless of the vendor or type of hardware. SDN also provides automation, programmability, scalability, and flexibility for network operations. A virtual private network (VPN) is a network technology that creates a secure and encrypted connection over a public network, such as the Internet. A VPN allows remote users to access a private network and its resources securely. A VPN is not related to the management of network policies from a central portal or the hardware-agnostic approach of SDN. Load balancing is a network technique that distributes traffic across multiple servers or devices to optimize performance, reliability, and availability. Load balancing can be implemented using hardware or software, but it does not provide the same level of centralized management and control as SDN. Direct Connect is a service offered by some cloud providers that allows customers to establish a dedicated network connection between their on-premises network and the cloud provider's network. Direct Connect bypasses the public Internet and provides lower latency, higher bandwidth, and more consistent network performance. However, Direct Connect is not a generic network architecture that supports a hardware-agnostic approach, and it does not offer the same degree of network programmability and automation as SDN. - B. Technical maintenance of current IT assets
- C. Security of current IT solutions

NEW QUESTION # 574

Which of the following technologies allows a social media application to authenticate access to resources that are available in the cloud?

- A. Federation
- B. MFA
- C. LDAP
- D. Microservices

Answer: A

Explanation:

Federation is a technology that allows a social media application to authenticate access to resources that are available in the cloud. Federation enables users to sign in to a cloud service using their existing credentials from another identity provider, such as Facebook, Google, or Microsoft. This way, users do not need to create a separate account or password for the cloud service, and the cloud service does not need to store or manage user identities. Federation also simplifies access management, as the identity provider can control which users and groups are allowed to access the cloud service. Federation is based on standards such as OAuth, OpenID Connect, and SAML, which define how identity providers and cloud services can exchange authentication and authorization information.
