Which of the following commands can be used to see the list of processes monitored by the Watch Dog process?

- A. ps -ef | grep watchd
- B. cpstat fw -f watchdog
- C. cpwd_admin list
- D. fw ctl get str watchdog

Answer: C

Explanation:
To see the list of processes monitored by the WatchDog process (CPWD), you use the cpwd_admin list command.
Option A (cpstat fw -f watchdog): Shows firewall status and statistics for the "fw" context, not necessarily the list of monitored processes.
Option B (fw ctl get str watchdog): Not a valid parameter for retrieving the list of monitored processes; "fw ctl" deals with kernel parameters.
Option C (cpwd_admin list): Correct command that lists all processes monitored by CPWD, their status, and how many times they have been restarted.
Option D (ps -ef | grep watchd): This will list any running process that matches the string "watchd" but will not specifically detail which processes are being monitored by CPWD.
Therefore, the best answer is cpwd_admin list.
Check Point Troubleshooting Reference
sk97638: Explains Check Point WatchDog (CPWD) usage and the cpwd_admin utility.
R81.20 CLI Reference Guide: Describes common troubleshooting commands including cpwd_admin list.
Check Point Gaia Administration Guide: Provides instructions for monitoring system processes and verifying CPWD.

- A. cptop
- B. mpstat
- C. vmstat
- D. top

Answer: D

Explanation:
The top command is a Linux command that displays information about resource utilization for running processes and shows additional information for core utilization and memory. The top command provides a dynamic real-time view of the system, showing the processes that are consuming the most CPU, memory, and other resources. The top command also shows the total number of processes, the system load average, the uptime, and the CPU usage by user, system, and idle. The top command can be customized by using various options and interactive commands to change the display, sort the processes, filter the output, and kill processes. The other commands are incorrect because:
* B. vmstat is a Linux command that displays information about the virtual memory, CPU, disk, and system activity. It does not show information about individual processes or core utilization.
* C. cptop is a Check Point command that displays information about the firewall kernel activity, such as the number of connections, packets, drops, and rejects. It does not show information about other processes or memory usage.
* D. mpstat is a Linux command that displays information about the CPU utilization by each processor or core. It does not show information about processes or memory usage.
