Docker Certified Associate (DCA) Exam Sample Questions (Q89-Q94):

NEW QUESTION # 89
In the context of a swarm mode cluster, does this describe a node?
Solution: an instance of the Docker engine participating in the swarm

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:
Explanation
In the context of a swarm mode cluster, an instance of the Docker engine participating in the swarm is indeed a node1. A node can be either a manager or a worker, depending on the role assigned by the swarm manager2. A manager node handles the orchestration and management of the swarm, while a worker node executes the tasks assigned by the manager2. A node can join or leave a swarm at any time, and the swarm manager will reconcile the desired state of the cluster accordingly1. References:

NEW QUESTION # 90

A company's security policy specifies that development and production containers must run on separate nodes in a given Swarm cluster.
Can this be used to schedule containers to meet the security policy requirements?
Solution: label contraints

- A. No
- B. Yes

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 91

You are troubleshooting a Kubernetes deployment called api, and want to see the events table for this object. Does this command display it?
Solution: kubectl logs deployment api

- A. No
- B. Yes

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 92

You are running only Kubernetes workloads on a worker node that requires maintenance, such as installing patches or an OS upgrade.
Which command must be run on the node to gracefully terminate all pods on the node, while marking the node as unschedulable?

- A. `docker swarm leave'
- B. `docker node update -availability drain <node name>
- C. `kubectl cordon <node name>
- D. `kubectl drain <node name>'

Answer: D

Explanation:
The command kubectl drain <node name> is the correct one to run on the node to gracefully terminate all pods on the node, while marking the node as unschedulable. This command will safely evict all the pods from the node before you perform maintenance on the node, such as installing patches or an OS upgrade1. It will respect the PodDisruptionBudgets you have specified, if any, and allow the pod's containers to gracefully terminate1. It will also mark the node as unschedulable, so that no new pods can be scheduled on the node until it is ready1.
The other commands are not correct because:
*docker swarm leave will make the node leave the swarm cluster, but it will not affect the Kubernetes workloads on the node2.
*docker node update -availability drain <node name> will change the availability of the node to drain, which means that no new tasks can be assigned to the node, but it will not terminate the existing pods on the node3.
*kubectl cordon <node name> will mark the node as unschedulable, but it will not evict the pods on the node4.

NEW QUESTION # 93

During development of an application meant to be orchestrated by Kubernetes, you want to mount the /data directory on your laptop into a container.

Will this strategy successfully accomplish this?

Solution: Create a PersistentVolume with storageciass: "" and hostPath: /data, and a persistentVolumeClaim requesting this PV. Then use that PVC to populate a volume in a pod

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A
