NEW QUESTION # 118

Which of the following is a MAJOR consideration for implementing AVoIP?

- A. it requires the use of a fiber backbone
- B. it requires an understanding of compression, image quality, and latency
- C. it restricts sources from being accessed from anywhere
- D. it prohibits virtual architecture rearrangement

Answer: B

Explanation:

AVoIP (Audio Video over IP) involves transmitting AV signals over network infrastructure, which necessitates an understanding of compression, image quality, and latency to ensure signal integrity and performance. These factors are crucial in configuring networks that meet the requirements for high-quality, low-latency AV distribution.

CTS Technology Specialist Reference

CTS training materials highlight the importance of understanding network protocols, compression methods, and latency impacts when implementing AVoIP systems for optimal performance.

NEW QUESTION # 119

To help end users remember key points of the training, the training documentation should include

- A. equipment datasheets.
- B. instructions for maintaining system input devices.
- C. a customized quick start guide.
- D. user manuals for each piece of equipment.

Answer: C

Explanation:

A customized quick start guide is particularly useful for helping end users remember key points of the training. These guides provide concise, easy-to-follow instructions tailored to the specific system and user needs, highlighting the most important operational steps and features. This helps users quickly familiarize themselves with the system and perform essential tasks without having to refer to extensive manuals. Including visual aids, such as diagrams and screenshots, further enhances the effectiveness of the quick start guide.

NEW QUESTION # 120

Which one of these features has to be disabled for a network switch in a Dante network?

- A. QoS (Quality of Service)
- B. EEE (Energy Efficient Ethernet)
- C. IGMP (Internet Group Management Protocol)
- D. PoE (Power over Ethernet)

Answer: B

Explanation:

Energy Efficient Ethernet (EEE) must be disabled in a Dante network. EEE can cause latency and jitter issues which are detrimental to audio streams. Dante is designed for low-latency, high-reliability audio networking, and EEE's power-saving mechanisms, which involve putting links to sleep, can interfere with the consistent data transmission required by Dante networks. Disabling EEE ensures stable and uninterrupted network performance for audio applications.

NEW QUESTION # 121

The best practice for tagging AV equipment for inventory management is to

- A. only tag Items over $99.00 in value.
- B. include the value of each item on the tag.
- C. label all Items of the same model with a common identifier.
- D. use a unique identifier for each item.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The best practice for tagging AV equipment for inventory management is to use a unique identifier for each item. This ensures that each piece of equipment can be tracked individually, reducing the risk of loss or confusion. Unique identifiers can include barcodes or RFID tags, which facilitate accurate and efficient tracking of inventory. Axis Technology Specialist documentation stresses the importance of unique identifiers in maintaining precise records and managing assets effectively.
