Adobe Experience Manager DevOps Engineer Expert Sample Questions (Q17-Q22):

NEW QUESTION # 17

A DevOps engineer is running a test compilation of the project source code and encounters errors during a local compilation. The project source code is intended to be deployed to a development environment on Adobe Managed Services. The project source code has been upgraded from Java 8.

The project source code has been merged from multiple repositories into a single code base.

The project source code has been refactored to compile with Azul Zulu JDK 11.0.10. The project is intended for AEM 6.5.9 with a Cloud Manager deployment.

What is causing this issue?

- A. A class definition was not defined in the pom.xml
- B. Upgrade the project source code to JDK 17
- C. An unsupported version of JDK was used to compile
- D. Missing packages in the boot delegation property

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 18

A DevOps engineer is configuring the statfile to level 2 in the dispatcher configuration. The document root is configured to /var/www. Which level will be protected from invalidation?

- A. /content/eu/en
- B. /content/dam
- C. /var/www
- D. /consent

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Dispatcher statfileslevel property determines how granular cache invalidation is. By default (level 0), a single .stat file exists at the document root, and any page activation invalidates the entire cache. When set to level 2, the Dispatcher creates .stat files at depth 2 (e.g., /content/mysite/). If a page under /content/mysite/ is activated, only that specific .stat file is updated, invalidating only the cache for that site. Because /consent is at depth 1 (above the stat file level), it is mapped to the root .stat file. It is "protected" from the frequent invalidations happening in deeper, isolated branch folders like /content/eu/en because they no longer share the same stat file.

NEW QUESTION # 19

Which tool allows real-time monitoring of AEM logs for troubleshooting performance issues?

- A. Dispatcher Configuration File
- B. AEM Web Console (/system/console)
- C. CRXDE Lite
- D. Log Analyzer in Cloud Manager

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 20

A DevOps engineer is onboarding new members onto Cloud Manager. One new team member, a developer who is granted the Developer role, logs in successfully. The new team member cannot trigger a Build on the non-production pipeline because the build button does not display.

The new team member checks their role in the profile using the User Roles section and confirms that the Developer role is assigned. How can this issue be resolved?

- A. The team member needs to have Build permissions in the Admin Console.
- B. The team member needs to regenerate their Git access password.
- C. The team member needs the Deployment Manager role.
- D. The team member needs the Business Owner role.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Role-Based Access Control (RBAC) in Adobe Cloud Manager is strictly managed via the Adobe Admin Console. The "Developer" role grants read-only access to environments and pipelines, allowing the user to view execution steps, download logs, and access the Developer Console to push Git commits. However, the Developer role cannot initiate, override, or cancel pipeline executions. To trigger a build (making the Build button visible and active), the user must be assigned the "Deployment Manager" role within the Admin Console.

NEW QUESTION # 21

The customer needs to schedule the Workflow and Project Purge during their maintenance windows on their AEM as a Cloud Service instance. What should the DevOps engineer do?

- A. Edit the OSGI configurations in Git and trigger a deployment pipeline.
- B. Generate a support ticket to Adobe to schedule these maintenance tasks.
- C. Set up the tasks using the Cloud Manager wizard as part of the project.
- D. Create the schedules for these tasks using the Maintenance Card (Tools > Operations > Maintenance).

Answer: D

Explanation:

In both AEM On-Premise/Managed Services and AEM as a Cloud Service, routine repository maintenance tasks (like Version Purge, Workflow Purge, and Audit Log Purge) are configured natively within the AEM author UI. The DevOps engineer navigates to the Maintenance Dashboard via Tools > Operations > Dashboard > Maintenance to configure the daily and weekly maintenance windows and schedule which tasks run inside them.
