Network Appliance NetApp Certified AI Expert Exam Sample Questions (Q48-Q53):

NEW QUESTION # 48

A network administrator, attempting to harden the security of the data center, modifies a firewall access control list (ACL). Immediately afterward, the "Advisor Assistant" application pods can no longer mount their required NFS volumes from the AFF A-Series. The MLOps team confirms the pods are stuck in a 'ContainerCreating' state with a 'MountVolume.Setup failed... connection timed out' error. The administrator provides the new, active firewall rule:

RULE | ACTION | PROTOCOL | SOURCE_IP_RANGE | DEST_IP_RANGE | DEST_PORT --|--|
|--|--51 | ALLOW | TCP | 10.20.5.0/24 | 10.20.10.0/24 | 2049

What is the most likely reason for the mount failures?

- A. The firewall rule is blocking the NFS lock manager (NLM) protocol, which is required for file locking.
- B. The 'SOURCE_IP_RANGE' is incorrect and does not include the Kubernetes pod IP addresses.
- C. The firewall rule is blocking the NFSv4 protocol, which requires TCP port 2050.
- D. The firewall rule is blocking the Portmapper/RPCbind service (TCP/UDP port 111), which is necessary for the initial NFS mount negotiation.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 49

A data scientist is working on a new model and needs a flexible environment for interactive data exploration, code development, and quick visualizations. A DevOps engineer is responsible for deploying the finalized model into a production pipeline that must run automatically every night without manual intervention.

Which tools are best suited for each of these roles?

- A. The data scientist should use a production pipeline, and the DevOps engineer should use a Jupyter Notebook.
- B. Both the data scientist and the DevOps engineer should use automated production pipelines.
- C. Both the data scientist and the DevOps engineer should use Jupyter Notebooks.
- D. The data scientist should use a Jupyter Notebook, and the DevOps engineer should use an automated production pipeline (e.g., Kubeflow Pipelines, Airflow).

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 50

A company is running its AI training workloads on a NetApp AFF A-Series system. To manage costs, they want to automatically move inactive training datasets and older model checkpoints from the high-performance all-flash tier to a lower-cost object storage tier, such as an on-premises StorageGRID or a public cloud bucket. The process must be transparent to the data scientists and not require changes to their scripts or file paths.

Which two NetApp technologies should be combined to achieve this goal? (Choose 2.)

- A. NetApp FlexCache
- B. NetApp XCP
- C. NetApp FabricPool
- D. NetApp StorageGRID
- E. NetApp SnapMirror

Answer: C,D

NEW QUESTION # 51

An architect is designing an AI solution for a European hospital chain to analyze patient diagnostic scans. The project is subject to strict GDPR regulations, which mandate that patient data cannot leave the sovereign territory. The application also requires near-instantaneous results for physicians reviewing the scans in the hospital.

Which deployment model best satisfies these security and performance requirements?

- A. A centralized public cloud deployment in North America for maximum scalability.
- B. An on-premises private cloud for training combined with edge deployments in each hospital for inference.
- C. A hybrid model using a public cloud for training and on-premises for inference.
- D. A multi-cloud strategy using different providers for training and inference to avoid vendor lock-in.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 52

An architect is designing the storage and network infrastructure for a new, large-scale AI cluster dedicated to training foundational models. The primary design goal is to achieve the highest possible data throughput and the lowest latency to ensure multi-million dollar GPU resources are never idle. Which two technologies are essential to include in the design to achieve this goal?

(Choose 2.)

- A. A 10GbE Ethernet network for all data traffic.
- B. A tiered storage architecture using NetApp FabricPool.
- C. An InfiniBand or RoCE-capable Ethernet network fabric.
- D. NetApp StorageGRID as the primary storage for the training datasets.

- E. GPUDirect Storage support on the storage system

Answer: C,E
