Abstract. Reading comprehension is essential for future learning and understanding, and without it, pupils will struggle academically. The study aimed to evaluate the reading comprehension skill level of the Grade 5 pupils through contextualized learning materials. The study was conducted in the school year 2022-2023 at Guadalupe Central Elementary School in the school division of Agusan del Sur. The study employed a quantitative approach with an emphasis on an experimental design of research. In selecting the respondents, a complete enumeration was utilized, of which 121 pupils from the 4 sections of Grade 5 were part of the study. The collected data was descriptively analyzed using frequency counts, mean, percentages, and a t-test for independent samples to test the difference in the mean scores. The study's findings revealed that Grade 5 learners had the capability to read and comprehend what they read. There are no non-readers from the posttest with less frustration. It implied that improvements have occurred. Using the contextualized learning materials at the end of the assessment indicated a move towards mastery. Teachers should create a standard reading guide to help and guide learners in reading.

Introduction

Poor reading comprehension has a crucial impact on understanding the context. This is one of the most common problems among students and teachers in basic education. Reading with comprehension laid the foundation for future learning and apprehension in all subject areas. Without this foundation, students would find it difficult to succeed academically, particularly in reading and writing as well as in subjects such as English, math, science, and social studies (Requiso-Jimenez & Bascos-Ocampo, 2022).

Decoding written symbols is the process of reading. Reading has a foundational position among all the macro skills because it must be mastered before any of the others. Reading, unfortunately, involves more than just understanding letters and symbols when it comes to teaching and learning. It is a complicated procedure that includes the processing of text and understanding of meaning in addition to word recognition (Delua et al., 2022).

Reading plays a significant role in a child's learning process as it is the most important language skill and one of the fundamental skills needed in the classroom (Sadiku, 2015). Yet, as claimed by Helande (2021), it is the mother of all study skills. Nevertheless, even though reading comprehension has long been recognized as a crucial part of the learning process, it is still a major issue for Philippine schools. Reading gives readers a fresh set of abilities and access to a wealth of information that will help them in their academic endeavors. All learning areas require reading as a prerequisite (Tomas et al., 2021).

Today's world is supposedly a reading world. A person must read in order to completely enjoy life. Because it is thought that reading is where most of the knowledge is obtained, reading is essential for everyone's mental and cultural development. People read for 80% of the tasks they complete each day. Because of this, reading is regarded as one of the most crucial activities in both school and daily life (Requiso-Jimenez and Bascos-Ocampo, 2022).
