SAP S/4HANA Cloud Private Edition - Production Planning and Manufacturing Sample Questions (Q22-Q27):

NEW QUESTION # 22

Which business processes are affected by settings in the order type dependent parameters? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question.

- A. Check material availability.
- B. Select master data.
- C. Schedule production orders.
- D. Define integration with cost accounting.

NEW QUESTION # 23

Your quality department detects a deviation in a raw material batch. Unfortunately, this batch has already been used in production. How can you identify all affected finished goods stocks?

Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question.

- A. Use batch determination
- B. Use batch derivation.
- C. Use the Batch Information Cockpit.
- D. Use the batch where-used list.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

To identify all affected finished goods stocks that contain a deviated raw material batch, you can use the following tools:

The Batch Information Cockpit (BIC) is a central tool that provides an overview of all relevant information and documents related to a batch. You can use the BIC to display the batch genealogy, which shows the hierarchical relationships between batches along the production and distribution process. You can also use the BIC to display the batch traceability, which shows the chronological sequence of events and transactions that affect a batch. The BIC allows you to analyze the batch history and the batch usage across different plants and systems.

The batch where-used list is a tool that determines how a batch is created and used in Production Planning (PP) through various stages of production and displays the result in a list. You can use the batch where-used list to find out in which other batches a batch was used and from which other batches a batch was created. This is important in the case of complaints and questions about product safety if the composition of semi-finished and finished products has to be documented across all production levels.

Batch derivation and batch determination are not tools to identify affected finished goods stocks, but rather tools to assign batches to production orders or sales orders based on certain criteria. Batch derivation is a process of transferring characteristics or values from one batch to another, while batch determination is a process of finding suitable batches for a requirement based on predefined conditions. When can consumption of planned independent requirements take place for planning strategy 40 (Planning with final assembly)?

- A. When MRP creates a planned order
- B. When MRP creates a dependent requirement
- C. When you create a sales order
- D. When MRP creates a planned order

Answer: C

Explanation:

Planning strategy 40 (Planning with final assembly) is a make-to-stock strategy that uses planned independent requirements to trigger the procurement and production of the necessary assemblies and components before receipt of the sales orders. As soon as the sales order is received, it consumes the planned independent requirements and adjusts the master plan to suit the current requirements situation. This means that the important feature of this planning strategy is that you can react quickly to customers' requirements. The consumption of planned independent requirements can take place when you create a sales order, as well as when you change or delete a sales order.
