Lpi Linux Essentials Certificate Exam - version 1.6 Sample Questions (Q47-Q52):

NEW QUESTION # 47

Which command adds the new user tux and creates the user's home directory with default configuration files?

- A. useradd -m tux
- B. useradd -o default tux
- C. defaultuser tux
- D. passwd -a tux
- E. usercreate tux

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 48

Why are web browser cookies considered dangerous?

- A. Cookies can contain and execute viruses and malware.
- B. Cookies consume significant amounts of storage and can exhaust disk space.
- C. Cookies are always public and accessible to anyone on the internet.
- D. Cookies store critical data which is lost when a cookie is deleted.
- E. Cookies support identification and tracking of users.

Answer: E

Explanation:

Web browser cookies are small pieces of data that are stored by a website on a user's browser. They are used to remember information about the user, such as preferences, login details, shopping cart items, etc. Cookies can also be used to identify and track users across different websites, which can have implications for privacy and security. For example, cookies can be used to show targeted ads based on the user's browsing history, or to collect personal information without the user's consent. Cookies are not inherently dangerous, but they can pose some risks if they are misused or compromised by malicious actors. Reference:

NEW QUESTION # 49

Which of the following commands shows the absolute path to the current working directory?

- A. who
- B. cd ~/home
- C. ls -l
- D. pwd
- E. cd ..

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

The command `pwd` stands for "print working directory". It will print the absolute path of the current working directory to the terminal. For example, if we are currently in the `/home/user/directory`, it will print out that exact path¹. The `pwd` command is useful for finding out where we are in the file system hierarchy and for verifying the location of files and directories².

The other options are not commands that show the absolute path to the current working directory. The `who` command shows the users who are currently logged in to the system³. The `cd ...` command changes the current working directory to the parent directory of the current one². The `ls -l` command lists the files and directories in the current working directory in a long format, which shows the permissions, ownership, size, date, and name of each file and directory². The `cd ~/home` command changes the current working directory to the `/home` directory under the user's home directory, which may or may not exist². References:

NEW QUESTION # 50

When typing a long command line at the shell, what single character can be used to split a command across multiple lines?

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation

The backslash character (\) is used to escape the meaning of the next character in a command line. This means that the next character is treated as a literal character, not as a special character. For example, if you want to use a space in a file name, you can use a backslash before the space to prevent the shell from interpreting it as a separator. Similarly, if you want to split a long command line across multiple lines, you can use a backslash at the end of each line to tell the shell that the command is not finished yet. The shell will ignore the newline character and continue reading the next line as part of the same command.

For example, you can write:

ls -l/home/user/Documents
```

instead of:

```
ls -l/home/user/Documents
```

Both commands will produce the same output, but the first one is easier to read and type. References:
