CrowdStrike Certified Cloud Specialist Sample Questions (Q260-Q265):

NEW QUESTION # 260

Which of the following scenarios would indicate a risky Azure Service Principal as identified by a Cloud Infrastructure Entitlement Manager (CIEM)?

- A. A Service Principal with "Contributor" role used exclusively for deploying infrastructure.
- B. A Service Principal with an expired credential and no associated roles.
- C. A Service Principal with "Reader" role assigned to an isolated development environment.
- D. A Service Principal with "Owner" role and no restrictions on its scope, accessible by an unused application.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Option A: The "Contributor" role has elevated permissions, but if the Service Principal is actively used for its intended purpose and scoped appropriately, it is not inherently risky.

Option B: An expired credential and no roles assigned effectively nullify any risk associated with the Service Principal. It would not be flagged as risky by CIEM.

Option C: The "Reader" role is read-only and does not allow modification of resources, making it a low-risk assignment. It is scoped to an isolated environment, further reducing risk.

Option D: An unused application with "Owner" role poses significant risk because it has unrestricted permissions across the subscription. If compromised, this Service Principal could enable attackers to gain full control over the environment.

NEW QUESTION # 261

When configuring automated remediation workflows for AWS findings in Falcon Fusion, which of the following actions demonstrates the best practice for securing cloud resources?

- A. Isolate the affected EC2 instance using a workflow action.
- B. Manually trigger the remediation workflow after reviewing the findings.
- C. Terminate all EC2 instances in the same VPC as the flagged instance.
- D. Grant Falcon Fusion permissions to modify all AWS configurations.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Option A: Manual intervention slows down the response process, negating the benefits of automation. The workflow should be designed to act automatically based on predefined triggers and actions.

Option B: Isolating an affected EC2 instance is a best practice for mitigating threats while minimizing disruption. This approach ensures that the issue is contained without impacting unrelated resources.

Option C: Terminating all instances in the same VPC is overly aggressive and likely unnecessary.

Automated remediation should be precise and targeted to avoid disrupting operations.

Option D: Providing excessive permissions violates security best practices. IAM roles should follow the principle of least privilege, granting only the permissions needed for specific remediation actions.

NEW QUESTION # 262

A customer is attempting to register an Azure cloud account in CrowdStrike Falcon, but the registration fails with an error: 1. "App registration not found." What is the most likely issue causing this error?

- A. The customer is using an outdated version of the CrowdStrike Falcon console.
- B. The Azure Active Directory application registration has not been created or configured.
- C. The Azure tenant is not using default security settings.
- D. The CrowdStrike Falcon license does not include Azure integration.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Option A: CrowdStrike registration does not require Azure tenants to use default security settings.

Security settings can influence permissions, but the error in question is specific to the application registration process.

Option B: While licensing can limit certain functionalities, it does not directly cause the "App registration not found" error. Licensing issues are usually flagged in the CrowdStrike console or during setup.

Option C: The version of the console does not impact the ability to register a cloud account.

Console updates usually address feature enhancements or bug fixes, not core registration functionality.

Option D: This is the correct answer because the error specifically points to a missing or misconfigured Azure Active Directory application registration. CrowdStrike requires an application registration in Azure AD to authenticate and access resources in the customer's Azure environment. If this step is missed or done incorrectly, the registration will fail.

NEW QUESTION # 263

After performing an image assessment in Falcon Cloud Security, which of the following is a typical actionable recommendation?

- A. Apply a pod security policy to restrict privileged containers.
- B. Disable unused Kubernetes Admission Controllers.
- C. Limit the number of pods per node to prevent resource exhaustion.
- D. Update container images to address identified critical vulnerabilities.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Option A: Admission Controllers provide security and compliance enforcement, and disabling them would reduce security posture rather than align with image assessment results.

Option B: Applying pod security policies is a general security best practice but is not directly derived from an image assessment.

Option C: Image assessments identify vulnerabilities and provide actionable recommendations, such as updating base images or dependencies to mitigate critical security risks.

Option D: Limiting pods per node is a capacity management measure, not an outcome of image assessments focused on vulnerabilities.

NEW QUESTION # 264

Which of the following scenarios represents a security risk that CrowdStrike Identity Analyzer (CIEM) is designed to identify and address?

- A. A serverless function has a concurrency limit set to 100 executions
- B. An encrypted storage bucket is accessed by an authorized application
- C. An IAM role with permissions to delete all cloud resources is assigned to multiple non-human identities
- D. A network security group is configured to allow inbound traffic on port 443

Answer: C

Explanation:

Option A: Allowing inbound traffic on port 443 (HTTPS) is a standard practice for secure web services. While this could be a misconfiguration if unnecessary, it falls under network security rather than identity management, which is the focus of CIEM.

Option B: Concurrency settings relate to resource performance and scalability, not identity or entitlement management. CIEM does not monitor or manage execution limits for serverless functions.

Option C: CIEM is specifically designed to detect and analyze overly permissive roles and identities, particularly when sensitive permissions (like resource deletion) are assigned to multiple non-human identities. This scenario poses a significant security risk if those identities are compromised or misused.

Option D: This is an expected and secure behavior when proper access policies are in place.

CIEM would not flag this as an issue since the access is authorized and aligns with standard operational practices.
