Adobe Experience Manager DevOps Engineer Expert Sample Questions (Q65-Q70):

NEW QUESTION # 65

A DevOps engineer is supporting a client on Adobe Managed Services. The setup will be migrated to AEM as a Cloud Service. Which two methods can be applied for scaling publish instances on the current platform? (Choose two.)

- A. Manual scaling via Cloud Manager horizontally
- B. Manual scaling via the Adobe I/O CLI vertically
- C. Auto scaling via Cloud Manager vertically
- D. Manual scaling via CSE horizontally
- E. Auto scaling via Cloud Manager horizontally

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

This question draws a technical comparison between how scaling works on the legacy Adobe Managed Services (AMS) platform versus the target AEM as a Cloud Service (AEMaaCS) platform. On the current legacy AMS platform, horizontal scaling (adding more instances) requires submitting a ticket to a Customer Success Engineer (CSE) to provision and attach new VMs manually (Option E). By contrast, on AEM as a Cloud Service, publish instances scale automatically (Auto scaling) horizontally via Cloud Manager based on live traffic thresholds, or can be scaled via Cloud Manager logic (Option A represents the target platform's cloud-native scaling methodology, though standard AEMaaCS implies Auto scaling; Cloud Manager orchestrates this).

NEW QUESTION # 66

An AEM instance is updating and replicating pages at a very high rate. Monitoring alerts indicate a high number of requests to the publish instances. How can the DevOps engineer throttle the number of cache invalidations?

- A. Configure the Retry Delay property in the flush agent
- B. Use the /invalidateHandler setting in the dispatcher configuration
- C. Configure the connect Timeout property in the flush agent
- D. Use the /graceperiod setting in the dispatcher configuration

Answer: D

Explanation:

In the AEM Dispatcher farm configuration, high-frequency replication events can cause "cache stampedes" where the cache is constantly invalidated, forcing all traffic back to the publish instances simultaneously and spiking CPU. The /graceperiod property mitigates this. When set, it defines a window of time (e.g., 2 seconds) during which the Dispatcher will continue to serve "stale" (recently invalidated) cached content to end-users while a single request is sent to the publish tier to fetch the new content. Once fetched, the cache is updated.

This effectively throttles invalidation spikes and protects the publish instances from traffic overloads.

NEW QUESTION # 67

Which actions can be performed using the Adobe Admin Console? (Choose three)

- A. Configure replication agents for content synchronization
- B. Create and track Adobe support cases
- C. Deploy AEM code packages
- D. Manage federated SSO authentication
- E. Assign roles and permissions for AEM users

Answer: B,D,E

NEW QUESTION # 68

A client reports that updated content is not reflecting on their AEM site even after publishing. What should you check first?

- A. Clear the local browser cache and refresh the page
- B. Restart the AEM publish instance
- C. Delete the entire cache directory manually
- D. Verify if the Dispatcher cache was invalidated correctly

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 69

Which AEM feature is used to monitor active OSGi configurations?

- A. Cloud Manager UI
- B. OSGi Web Console (/system/console/configMgr)
- C. AEM Operations Dashboard
- D. CRXDE Lite

Answer: B
