Which Db2 Big SQL component uses system resources efficiently to maximize throughput and minimize response time?

- A. Analyzer
- B. Scheduler
- C. StreamThrough
- D. Hive

Answer: C

Explanation:
StreamThrough is a high-performance component used in Db2 Big SQL within IBM Cloud Pak for Data that is optimized to manage data streams and queries efficiently. It is designed to maximize throughput and minimize query response times by optimizing memory usage, resource allocation, and processing logic.
Unlike Hive or Analyzer, which are used for query execution and analysis, StreamThrough enables efficient pipeline execution by streamlining data handling. Scheduler is used for job timing but does not influence runtime efficiency directly. StreamThrough is purpose-built to enhance performance through optimal resource usage.
