IAPP Certified Information Privacy Professional/United States (CIPP/US) Sample Questions (Q121-Q126):

NEW QUESTION # 121

Why was the Privacy Protection Act of 1980 drafted?

- A. To assist in the prosecution of white-collar crimes
- B. To protect individuals from personal privacy invasion by the police
- C. To respond to police searches of newspaper facilities
- D. To assist prosecutors in civil litigation against newspaper companies

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Privacy Protection Act of 1980 (PPA) is a federal law that protects journalists and newsrooms from search and seizure by government officials in connection with criminal investigations or prosecutions. The PPA prohibits the government from searching for or seizing any work product materials or documentary materials possessed by a person who intends to disseminate them to the public through a newspaper, book, broadcast, or other similar form of public communication, unless certain exceptions apply. The PPA was drafted in response to the Supreme Court's decision in Zurcher v. Stanford Daily, which upheld the constitutionality of a police search of a student newspaper's office without a subpoena, based on probable cause that the newspaper had evidence of a crime. The PPA was intended to protect the First Amendment rights of the press and the privacy interests of journalists and their sources from unreasonable government intrusion<sup>123</sup>. References:

NEW QUESTION # 122

Which of the following would NOT constitute an exception to the authorization requirement under the HIPAA Privacy Rule?

- A. Disclosing health information for public health activities.
- B. Disclosing health information to file a child abuse report.
- C. Disclosing health information needed to treat a medical emergency.
- D. Disclosing health information needed to pay a third party billing administrator.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 123

Which of the following is NOT one of three broad categories of products offered by data brokers, as identified by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC)?

- A. Research (such as information for understanding consumer trends).
- B. Marketing (such as appending data to customer information that a marketing company already has).
- C. Risk mitigation (such as information that may reduce the risk of fraud).
- D. Location of individuals (such as identifying an individual from partial information).

Answer: D

Explanation:

Data brokers are companies that collect, analyze, and share personal information about consumers for various purposes, such as marketing, risk mitigation, and research. The U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) conducted a study of nine data brokers in 2012 and published a report in 2014, titled "Data Brokers: A Call for Transparency and Accountability". In the report, the FTC identified three broad categories of products offered by data brokers, based on the primary purposes for which the products are used by their customers. The three categories are: <sup>12</sup>

* Marketing products: These products help customers target potential customers, tailor marketing offers, measure the effectiveness of marketing campaigns, and improve customer relationships. Marketing products include data elements, segments, scores, lists, and analytics that are derived from consumer data. Data brokers may provide marketing products through direct marketing (such as postal mail, e-mail, or phone), online marketing (such as online display ads, social media, or mobile apps), or marketing analytics (such as measuring consumer behavior, preferences, and trends)<sup>12</sup>

* Risk mitigation products: These products help customers verify and authenticate consumers' identities, prevent fraud, and comply with legal obligations. Risk mitigation products include identity verification, identity authentication, fraud prevention, and compliance products that are based on consumer data. Data brokers may provide risk mitigation products through various methods, such as matching consumer-provided information with data broker records, generating questions or challenges based on consumer data, or providing scores or indicators of fraud risk or compliance status<sup>12</sup>

* Research products: These products help customers understand consumer behavior, preferences, and trends, as well as market conditions, industry developments, and economic factors. Research products include reports, studies, statistics, and insights that are derived from consumer data. Data brokers may provide research products through various formats, such as online portals, dashboards, newsletters, or custom reports<sup>12</sup> The FTC report did not include location of individuals as one of the three broad categories of products offered by data brokers. Location of individuals may be a specific type of product or service that some data brokers provide, but it is not a primary purpose for which data brokers use consumer data. Therefore, the correct answer is C. Location of individuals (such as identifying an individual from partial information).

NEW QUESTION # 124

Which of the following does Title VII of the Civil Rights Act prohibit an employer from asking a job applicant?

- A. Questions about a national origin
- B. Questions about age
- C. Questions about intended pregnancy
- D. Questions about a disability

Answer: C

Explanation:

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is a federal law that prohibits employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, and national origin. It also prohibits retaliation against individuals who assert their rights under the law or participate in an EEOC investigation. Title VII applies to employers with 15 or more employees, as well as to employment agencies, labor organizations, and joint labor-management committees.

Title VII prohibits employers from making pre-employment inquiries that express a preference, limitation, or specification based on any of the protected characteristics, unless they are bona fide occupational qualifications (BFOQs). BFOQs are rare and narrowly construed exceptions that allow employers to consider a protected characteristic when it is reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the business. For example, a religious organization may require its employees to share its faith, or a women's shelter may hire only female counselors.

NEW QUESTION # 125

Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), what must a person who is denied employment based upon his credit history receive?

- A. A prompt notification from the employer.
- B. Information from several consumer reporting agencies (CRAs).
- C. A list of rights from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB).
- D. An opportunity to reapply with the employer.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The FCRA requires that an employer who takes an adverse action against an applicant or employee based on information in a consumer report must provide a notice of the adverse action to the individual. The notice must include the name, address, and phone number of the CRA that supplied the report; a statement that the CRA did not make the decision and cannot explain why the adverse action was taken; a notice of the individual's right to dispute the accuracy or completeness of the information in the report; and a notice of the individual's right to obtain a free copy of the report from the CRA within 60 days.
