NAHQ Certified Professional in Healthcare Quality Examination Sample Questions (Q405-Q410):

NEW QUESTION # 405

An ambulatory care practice has reviewed data to identify patients with multiple visits to the emergency room within the last six months.

The population health management technique for this type of data review is called

- A. hot-spotting
- B. public health surveillance.
- C. syndromic surveillance.
- D. cold-spotting.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Hot-spotting (Answer B) is a population health management technique used to identify patients or geographic areas that generate a disproportionately high number of emergency room visits or healthcare costs. By focusing on these "hot spots," healthcare providers can develop targeted interventions to address the underlying issues that lead to frequent ER visits, such as chronic disease management, social support needs, or access to primary care. The aim is to improve patient outcomes and reduce healthcare utilization in these high-need areas.

The other options refer to different public health or surveillance methods:

Public health surveillance (A) is the continuous, systematic collection and analysis of health data for the planning, implementation, and evaluation of public health practice.

Syndromic surveillance (C) involves the real-time collection of data on symptoms or syndromes to detect potential outbreaks of disease before diagnoses are confirmed.

Cold-spotting (D) typically refers to identifying areas or populations with low healthcare utilization or unmet needs, which is the opposite focus of hot-spotting.

NEW QUESTION # 406

Some database projects rely on medical record review because many of the data are not available in administrative database, e.g.

- A. Nursing record
- B. Patients of test and lab reports
- C. Measurement that require time stamp, such as administration of antibiotics within one hour before surgical incision
- D. Patient's entries and visits to the physician

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 407

A local health center is launching a community health assessment. What data is recommended to identify the potential needs of the population?

- A. zip codes for patients frequently using the emergency department
- B. number of fast food restaurants in the area
- C. highest level of education of healthcare professionals
- D. top five diagnoses for patient visits

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 408

Which of the following most accurately describes medication reconciliation?

- A. sharing responsibility between pharmacy and nursing
- B. identifying and resolving medication discrepancies
- C. monitoring patient adherence to medication regimens
- D. creating a list of a patient's prescription medications

Answer: B

Explanation:

Medication reconciliation is the process of identifying and resolving medication discrepancies to ensure that patients receive the correct medications. This process involves comparing the patient's current medications with new prescriptions, ensuring that there are no omissions, duplications, or interactions that could lead to adverse effects.

Steps in Medication Reconciliation: The process typically involves:

Collecting an accurate list of the patient's current medications (including prescription, over-the-counter, and herbal supplements).

Comparing this list with new medication orders or prescriptions.

Identifying discrepancies, such as omitted medications, incorrect dosages, or potentially harmful drug interactions.

Resolving these discrepancies by consulting with the prescribing physician, pharmacist, or other healthcare providers.

Comparison to Other Options:

B: creating a list of a patient's prescription medications: While creating a medication list is a part of the reconciliation process, the primary goal is to resolve discrepancies, not just to list medications.

C: monitoring patient adherence to medication regimens: Monitoring adherence is important, but it is not the primary focus of medication reconciliation.

D: sharing responsibility between pharmacy and nursing: While collaboration between pharmacy and nursing is essential, medication reconciliation is specifically about identifying and addressing discrepancies.

Reference: NAHQ guidelines on medication safety stress the importance of medication reconciliation as a critical process for preventing errors and ensuring patient safety, focusing on the identification and resolution of discrepancies as the core objective.

NEW QUESTION # 409

A performance improvement team has been examining delays in getting admissions from the emergency department (ED) to the coronary care unit. The team has collected data and determined that a significant number of delays are occurring because cardiologists are not consulting on their patients in the ED in a timely manner. The best way to communicate this information to the cardiologists is to:

- A. Prepare a letter for the Chief Administrator's signature to all cardiologists, requesting their assistance.
- B. Forward all delays from the ED to the cardiology peer review committee.
- C. Ask the team leader to e-mail all the cardiologists and describe the problem.
- D. Attend the next cardiologists' meeting to solicit their input.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Engaging stakeholders directly in discussions about performance issues fosters collaboration and accountability. Attending the cardiologists' meeting allows for real-time dialogue, understanding of challenges, and joint development of solutions. This approach aligns with effective communication strategies in performance improvement initiatives.
