ASET Ethics Examination-ASET Professional Practice Exam (PPE) Sample Questions (Q99-Q104):

NEW QUESTION # 99

Which of the following is the most likely reason that a regulated member was found to be unethical?

- A. The member refused to propose an estimated cost lower than the realistic expected full estimate.
- B. The member put service above financial gain.
- C. The member cut fees to an extent that resulted in incompetent service.
- D. A potential client was made aware that a competitive pricing strategy was offered.

Answer: C

Explanation:

While professional technologists operate in a competitive free market and are allowed to offer competitive pricing strategies, the ASET Code of Ethics mandates that members must provide competent, high-quality service that protects the public. Engaging in "fee cutting" or "lowballing" to win a contract becomes a severe ethical violation when the fee is reduced to such an extent that the professional can no longer afford to allocate the necessary time, resources, or qualified personnel to complete the work safely and up to industry standards. If a member slashes their budget and subsequently rushes designs, skips crucial testing phases, or relies on unqualified staff to maintain their profit margin, they are directly endangering the public and failing in their professional duty. Putting service above financial gain is highly ethical, and refusing to provide an unrealistically low estimate is an example of professional integrity. Therefore, cutting fees to a point that directly results in incompetent or unsafe service is the clear unethical action.

NEW QUESTION # 100

A regulated member of ASET has witnessed consistent unprofessional behaviour by a competitor organization, and so the member posts negative comments about the organization to a popular online business review website. The competitor believes the negative comments have harmed sales and threatened the reputation of the organization. Under which of the following areas of law might the regulated member be considered liable?

- A. Employment law
- B. Privacy law
- C. Securities law
- D. Tort law

Answer: D

Explanation:

Tort law is a branch of civil law that deals with civil wrongs (other than breach of contract) that cause harm or loss to another party, resulting in legal liability for the person who commits the tortious act. In this scenario, the regulated member publicly posted negative comments that allegedly harmed the competitor's business reputation and sales. This action falls under a specific type of tort known as "defamation" (specifically "libel," since it is written/published online). Even if the member believes they were justified, making public statements that damage another organization's financial standing without utilizing proper regulatory or legal channels exposes the member to a civil lawsuit for damages.

Furthermore, the ASET Code of Ethics requires members to conduct themselves with fairness and courtesy toward clients, colleagues, and others. Publicly smearing a competitor online is not only a potential tort but also highly unprofessional conduct.

NEW QUESTION # 101

What federal law governs privacy?

- A. Digital Millennium Copyright Act
- B. Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act
- C. Personal Information and Protection Act
- D. Privacy Act

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Canada, the primary federal law that governs how private-sector organizations collect, use, and disclose personal information in the course of commercial business is the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (PIPEDA). PIPEDA establishes strict ground rules for the handling of sensitive client, customer, and employee data, ensuring that individuals' privacy rights are respected in the digital and commercial age. While the "Privacy Act" is also a federal law, it specifically applies only to the federal government's own handling of personal information, not the private sector.

The "Personal Information Protection Act" (PIPA) is a provincial equivalent (e.g., in Alberta), and the "Digital Millennium Copyright Act" (DMCA) is an American copyright law, not a Canadian privacy law. ASET professionals managing client data, drafting contracts, or designing IT systems must ensure their practices strictly comply with the stringent consent and security requirements outlined in PIPEDA.

NEW QUESTION # 102

Which of the following statements describes the role of a professional regulatory organization?

- A. To publish relevant information about the profession
- B. To set the qualifications for admission into the profession
- C. To seek employment opportunities for members of the profession
- D. To coordinate licensing policies and procedures between organizations

Answer: B

Explanation:

The primary role of a Professional Regulatory Organization (PRO) like ASET is established by provincial legislation (the EGPA) to protect the public. To achieve this mandate, the most fundamental function of a PRO is to set, maintain, and enforce the qualifications for admission into the profession.

This involves evaluating academic credentials, assessing practical work experience, administering professional practice examinations, and ensuring applicants have good character. By acting as the gatekeeper, the PRO ensures that only competent, qualified individuals are legally permitted to use protected titles and practice engineering technology independently. While PROs may occasionally publish relevant information or coordinate with other bodies, these are secondary functions. Crucially, a PRO is not a union or an advocacy group; its purpose is not to seek employment opportunities, negotiate wages, or protect the financial interests of its members (Option C). Its overriding duty is regulatory—ensuring the competency of its practitioners to safeguard public welfare.

NEW QUESTION # 103

A local institute of technology has asked a regulated member to present a seminar to the graduating class in the member's field of technology. Since economic times are poor at present, it is the member's opinion that some of these students may soon be competing with the member in the job market. The member decides to leave out some industry information in the seminar. Did the member act unethically?

- A. The member acted ethically as it is fair to omit information from a seminar that would give students a competitive edge in the market.
- B. The member acted unethically by accepting the invitation to present the seminar given the member's concerns about the economy.
- C. The member acted ethically because it is the member's discretion as to what information to include in the seminar.
- D. The member acted unethically by serving as a poor role model for the profession and providing incomplete information to the students.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The ASET Code of Ethics requires members to "promote public knowledge and appreciation of applied science, information, and engineering technology," and to conduct themselves with integrity, fairness, and courtesy toward colleagues. When a professional accepts an invitation to educate students, they are acting as an ambassador and role model for the profession. Deliberately withholding pertinent industry information from a graduating class out of self-serving fear of future job competition is a profound breach of professional integrity. It violates the spirit of knowledge-sharing that drives the profession forward and fails to support the next generation of technologists. By allowing personal financial anxiety to compromise the quality and honesty of the educational seminar, the member acts selfishly and unethically. A true professional recognizes that a well-educated, competent workforce ultimately benefits the industry and the public, and they do not view emerging graduates as adversaries to be sabotaged through omissions.
