Microsoft Dynamics 365 Supply Chain Management Functional Consultant Sample Questions (Q460-Q465):

NEW QUESTION # 460

A frozen food distribution company is implementing Dynamics 365 Supply Chain Management.

The warehouse manager wants to ensure that after items are picked, a temperature check is performed and verified on the items before shipment to customers.

You need to configure the system.

Which components should you configure? To answer, select the appropriate options in the answer area.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

Requirement	Component
Create an automated temperature check step.	Quality associationQuality orderNonconformance
Configure temperature range.	Test variablesTest groupsItem quality groups

Answer:

Explanation:

Requirement	Component
Create an automated temperature check step.	Quality associationQuality orderNonconformance
Configure temperature range.	Test variablesTest groupsItem quality groups

Explanation:

Box 1: Quality association

A quality association defines all the following information for a quality order that is generated:

The transaction event

The set of tests that must be performed on the items

The acceptable quality level (AQL)

The sampling plan

You must define a quality association for each variation in a business process that requires automatic generation of quality orders. For example, a quality order can be generated in the business processes for purchase orders, quarantine orders, sales orders, and production orders.

Box 2: Test variables

For every qualitative test that is defined on the Tests page, you must define a test variable and its possible outcomes (results). (For qualitative tests, the Type field on the Tests page is set to Option.) You use the Test variables page to set up, edit, and view the possible outcomes for a test variable that is associated with a qualitative test. For each outcome, you assign an outcome status of either Pass or Fail to indicate whether the test is passed or failed when that outcome is selected as a test result. You use the Test groups page to assign a test variable and a default outcome for it to an individual qualitative test.

For every test variable, we recommend that you define at least two outcomes: one that has an outcome status of Pass and one that has an outcome status of Fail. There is no limit on the total number of variables or outcomes that can be defined. Additionally, multiple tests can use the same test variables to record results.

Examples of test variables

Example

A manufacturing company performs two tests on manufactured materials. In one test, the pH level is associated with a color strip. Acceptable pH levels are in lighter colors, and unacceptable pH levels are in darker colors. In another test, multiple visual inspections are performed, and quality workers use their judgement to determine whether the item passes or fails the visual inspection.

NEW QUESTION # 461

You need to configure the system for the customer tier B pricing.

What should you do?

- A. Assign the product filter code for the item to the customer tier B customer group.
- B. Configure an item sales control for the item.
- C. Approve and confirm the trade allowance agreement.
- D. Enable the customer group in the Activate price/discount form.
- E. Assign the item to the customer tier B price group.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

Note: Customers are categorized into four pricing tiers (A, B, C, and D) based on sales volume over the past 12 months.

Promotional fund and Trade allowance agreement

A trade allowance agreement is an incentive program where pay-for-performance monetary rewards are offered to customers that achieve specific volume targets and/or behavioral goals. Promotional funds are budgeted expenditures. In that way, the promotional campaigns can be captured.
