- A. Exit signs
- B. Emergency lighting
- C. Emergency exit doors
- D. Fire alarms

Answer: C

Explanation:

Emergency exit doors are a critical physical control designed to ensure safe and rapid evacuation during emergencies such as fires or earthquakes. These doors are typically clearly marked, unobstructed, and may include panic bars to allow easy exit without special knowledge or tools.

Fire alarms alert occupants, exit signs provide direction, and emergency lighting improves visibility, but none of these physically enable evacuation. Exit doors directly support life safety by allowing people to leave the building quickly and safely. Life safety is the highest priority in physical security design, and exit doors are mandatory under building and fire safety codes.
