Eligibility Process

As with other EC-Council certifications, ECIH can be earned in two ways: with or without attending the official training.

- The second option includes meeting the certification eligibility criteria. This comes with at least one year of working experience in the Information Security domain. In addition, the applicants are required to submit the Exam Eligibility Application Form and pay a non-refundable fee of $100.
- The first option entails completing the official course at any of the EC-Council Authorized Training Centers or attending the EC-Council live online training via iWeek. It also involves joining the self-study program through iLearn or attending the EC-Council live online training via iWeek. If you choose this path, you won't have to pay a registration fee for the exam, as this cost will be included in your training fees.

EC-COUNCIL EC Council Certified Incident Handler (ECIH v3) Sample Questions (Q52-Q57):

NEW QUESTION # 52
According to the Fourth Amendment of USA PATRIOT Act of 2001; if a search does NOT violate a person's "reasonable" or "legitimate" expectation of privacy then it is considered:

- A. Illegal/ illegitimate
- B. None of the above
- C. Unethical
- D. Constitutional/ Legitimate

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 53
Nervous Nat often sends emails with screenshots of what he thinks are serious incidents, but they always turn out to be false positives. Today, he sends another screenshot, suspecting a nation-state attack. As usual, you go through your list of questions, check your resources for information to determine whether the screenshot shows a real attack, and determine the condition of your network. Which step of IR did you just perform?

- A. Remediation
- B. Detection anc analysis (or identification)
- C. Recovery
- D. Preparation

Answer: B

Explanation:
When you receive a screenshot from Nervous Nat and go through a list of questions, check resources for information to determine the nature of the screenshot, and assess the condition of your network, you are engaging in the Detection and Analysis (or Identification) phase of Incident Response (IR). This phase is about identifying potential security incidents based on reported concerns, anomalies detected by security tools, or through the analysis of security alerts. In this scenario, despite the historical context of false positives, each report is treated seriously, requiring you to collect and analyze information to determine whether a real attack is happening. This involves verifying the validity of the incident, assessing its nature, scope, and impact, and deciding on the appropriate next steps. The detection and analysis phase is critical for determining the course of the IR process, including whether escalation is needed and what response measures should be initiated.
References:The ECIH v3 certification materials outline the Incident Response process, detailing steps from preparation, detection and analysis, containment, eradication, and recovery, to post-incident activities, highlighting the importance of thorough detection and analysis as the foundation for effective incident management.

NEW QUESTION # 55

An attacker traced out and found the kind of websites a target company/individual is frequently surfing and tested those particular websites to identify any possible vulnerabilities. When the attacker detected vulnerabilities in the website, the attacker started injecting malicious script/code into the web application that can redirect the webpage and download the malware onto the victim's machine. After infecting the vulnerable web application, the attacker waited for the victim to access the infected web application. Identify the type of attack performed by the attacker.

- A. Directory traversal
- B. Watering hole
- C. Cookie/Session poisoning
- D. Obfuscation application

Answer: B

Explanation:
The described attack is a "Watering hole" attack. This type of attack targets specific groups of users by infecting websites they are known to frequently visit. The attacker first identifies websites that are popular with the target group, then finds vulnerabilities in those websites to inject malicious code. When the victims visit the compromised site, the code redirects them to other sites or automatically downloads malware onto their machines. This attack leverages the trust users have in regularly visited sites to distribute malware.
Unlike obfuscation application, directory traversal, or cookie/session poisoning attacks, watering hole attacks specifically aim to compromise a commonly used and trusted website to target its users.References:The ECIH v3 certification materials discuss various cyber attack strategies, including watering hole attacks, and provide insights into how attackers exploit trusted relationships between websites and their users.
