IAPP Certified Information Privacy Technologist (CIPT) Sample Questions (Q242-Q247):

NEW QUESTION # 242
SCENARIO

Please use the following to answer the next question:

Light Blue Health (LBH) is a healthcare technology company developing a new web and mobile application that collects personal health information from electronic patient health records. The application will use machine learning to recommend potential medical treatments and medications based on information collected from anonymized electronic health records. Patient users may also share health data collected from other mobile apps with the LBH app.

The application requires consent from the patient before importing electronic health records into the application and sharing it with their authorized physicians or healthcare provider. The patient can then review and share the recommended treatments with their physicians securely through the app. The patient user may also share location data and upload photos in the app. The patient user may also share location data and upload photos in the app for a healthcare provider to review along with the health record. The patient may also delegate access to the app.

LBH's privacy team meets with the Application development and Security teams, as well as key business stakeholders on a periodic basis. LBH also implements Privacy by Design (PbD) into the application development process.

The Privacy Team is conducting a Privacy Impact Assessment (PIA) to evaluate privacy risks during development of the application. The team must assess whether the application is collecting descriptive, demographic or any other user related data from the electronic health records that are not needed for the purposes of the application. The team is also reviewing whether the application may collect additional personal data for purposes for which the user did not provide consent.

Regarding the app, which action is an example of a decisional interference violation?

- A. The app asks income level to determine the treatment of care.
- B. The app has a pop-up ad requesting sign-up for a pharmaceutical company newsletter.
- C. The app asks questions during account set-up to disclose family medical history that is not necessary for the treatment of the individual's symptoms.
- D. The app sells aggregated data to an advertising company without prior consent.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Asking for income level to determine treatment of care could be considered decisional interference because it could influence or interfere with an individual's ability to make decisions about their own healthcare. This type of information may not be necessary for providing medical recommendations and could potentially lead to discrimination or unequal treatment.

NEW QUESTION # 243

Which of the following would be the most appropriate solution for preventing privacy violations related to information exposure through an error message?

- A. Logging the session name and necessary parameters once the error occurs to enable trouble shooting.
- B. Handing exceptions internally and not displaying errors to the user.
- C. Creating default error pages or error messages which do not include variable data.
- D. Configuring the environment to use shorter error messages.

Answer: C

Explanation:
The most appropriate solution to prevent privacy violations due to information exposure through error messages is to create default error pages or messages that do not include variable data. This practice ensures that sensitive information is not inadvertently displayed to users in the event of an error. Displaying detailed error messages can expose system information or user data, potentially leading to security and privacy risks.
According to IAPP guidelines, handling errors in a way that minimizes the exposure of sensitive data is critical for maintaining privacy and security. By using generic error messages, the risk of information leakage is significantly reduced.

NEW QUESTION # 244

Which of the following best describes the basic concept of "Privacy by Design?"

- A. The adoption of privacy enhancing technologies.
- B. The implementation of privacy protection through system architecture.
- C. The introduction of business process to identify and assess privacy gaps.
- D. The integration of a privacy program with all lines of business.

Answer: B

Explanation:
the basic concept of "Privacy by Design" is the implementation of privacy protection through system architecture.

NEW QUESTION # 245
Which is NOT a way to validate a person's identity?

- A. Swiping a smartcard into an electronic reader.
- B. Using a program that creates random passwords.
- C. Answering a question about "something you know".
- D. Selecting a picture and tracing a unique pattern on it

Answer: B

Explanation:
Validating a person's identity typically involves methods such as something they know (e.g., a password or personal information), something they have (e.g., a smartcard), or something they are (e.g., biometric data). A program that creates random passwords does not validate identity; it merely generates passwords. Identity validation methods must involve a process where the individual proves who they are, such as through knowledge-based, possession-based, or biometric-based verification.
Reference: IAPP CIPT Certification Textbook, Chapter on Authentication and Identity Management, detailing various methods of identity validation and why password generation programs do not qualify.

NEW QUESTION # 246
What is the most effective first step to take to operationalize Privacy by Design principles in new product development and projects?

- A. Implementing a mandatory privacy review and legal approval process.
- B. Set up an online Privacy Impact Assessment tool to facilitate Privacy by Design compliance.
- C. Obtain leadership buy-in for a mandatory privacy review and approval process.
- D. Conduct annual Privacy by Design training and refreshers for all impacted personnel.

Answer: C

Explanation:
The most effective first step to operationalize Privacy by Design principles in new product development and projects is to obtain leadership buy-in for a mandatory privacy review and approval process. Leadership support is crucial for integrating privacy considerations into the core processes and ensuring that privacy becomes a priority throughout the organization. According to IAPP, gaining the commitment of top management sets the tone for the entire organization, fostering a culture that values and prioritizes privacy, thereby facilitating the successful implementation of Privacy by Design principles.
