Note: Only use one per page - this should represent the main heading/subject for the whole page. The tag defines a clickable button.

NEW QUESTION # 96
A company notifies its employees that emails will be automatically moved to a cloud-based server in 180 days. Which of the following describes this concept?

- A. Data constraints
- B. Data retention
- C. Data deletion
- D. Data processing

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 97
The duration of a phone call in milliseconds is an example of:

- A. boolean data.
- B. continuous data.
- C. ordinal data.
- D. nominal data.

Answer: B

Explanation:
The correct answer is D. Continuous data.
Continuous data is a type of quantitative data that can take any value within a range and can be measured with infinite precision.
Continuous data can be expressed as fractions, decimals, or percentages. Examples of continuous data are height, weight, temperature, time, speed, etc12 The duration of a phone call in milliseconds is an example of continuous data, because it can take any value within a range (from zero to infinity) and can be measured with infinite precision (up to milliseconds or even smaller units).
The duration of a phone call in milliseconds can also be expressed as fractions, decimals, or percentages of a larger unit (such as seconds, minutes, or hours).
Ordinal data is not correct, because ordinal data is a type of qualitative or categorical data that can be ordered or ranked according to some criterion. Ordinal data can have a logical order, but the intervals between the values are not equal or meaningful. Examples of ordinal data are grades, ratings, ranks, etc12 Nominal data is not correct, because nominal data is a type of qualitative or categorical data that can be labeled or named without any order or ranking. Nominal data can have a finite number of categories or classes, but the categories have no intrinsic value or hierarchy. Examples of nominal data are gender, color, nationality, etc12
Boolean data is not correct, because boolean data is a type of binary data that can have only two possible values: true or false.
Boolean data can be used to represent logical statements, conditions, or outcomes.
Examples of boolean data are yes/no, on/off, 1/0, etc.

NEW QUESTION # 98

A company's marketing department wants to do a promotional campaign next month. A data analyst on the team has been asked to perform customer segmentation, looking at how recently a customer bought the product, at what frequency, and at what value. Which of the following types of analysis would this practice be considered?

- A. Prescriptive
- B. Custer
- C. Trend
- D. Gap

Answer: B

Explanation:

Customer segmentation is a type of cluster analysis, which is a method of grouping data points based on their similarities or differences. Cluster analysis can help identify patterns and trends in the data, as well as target specific groups of customers for marketing purposes. One common technique for customer segmentation is RFM analysis, which stands for recency, frequency, and monetary value. This technique assigns a score to each customer based on how recently they bought the product, how often they buy the product, and how much they spend on the product. These scores can then be used to create clusters of customers with different characteristics and preferences. Therefore, the correct answer is D. NEW QUESTION # 99

What subset of Structured Query Language (SQL) is used to add, remove, modify, or retrieve the information stored within a relational database?

- A. DSL.
- B. DQL.
- C. DDL.
- D. DML.

Answer: D

Explanation:
Explanation
Correct answer D. DML.
The Data Manipulation Language (DML) is used to work with the data stored in a database. DML includes the SELECT, INSERT, UPDATE, and DELETE commands.
The Data Definition Language (DDL) contains the commands used to create and structure a relational database. It includes the CREATE, ALTER, and DROP commands.
DDL and DML are the only two sublanguages of SQL.
