NEW QUESTION # 42

What is one goal of a risk matrix or risk plot?

- A. To communicate the results of a risk assessment in a common format that a variety of people can understand
- B. To determine what level of risk is acceptable to management based on consequence and probability of failure
- C. To show ISO-risk lines and boxes on a matrix and determine which risks are acceptable and which are not
- D. To understand how consequence and probability of risk varies between different levels of risk

Answer: A

Explanation:

API 580 clearly outlines the purpose of a risk matrix or plot in Section 11.6.1:

"One goal of the risk analysis is to communicate the results in a common format that a variety of people can understand. Using a risk matrix or plot is helpful in accomplishing this goal." Thus, the risk matrix serves as a visual and communicative tool for presenting risk levels in a form accessible to both technical and non-technical stakeholders. Other options, while conceptually related, are either misinterpretations or overly specific.
