NEW QUESTION # 28

A GIS administrator is setting up a distributed collaboration between an ArcGIS Online organization and an ArcGIS Enterprise organization for a data validation project. Users from a second ArcGIS Online org will also participate.
What should the administrator set up?

- A. A collaboration between ArcGIS Online and ArcGIS Enterprise and then add users from the second ArcGIS Online org to the common group
- B. Multiple collaborations between the ArcGIS Enterprise organization and multiple ArcGIS Online organizations
- C. One collaboration with all three organizations: ArcGIS Enterprise and two ArcGIS Online orgs
- D. Enable data sharing with public access

Answer: B

Explanation:
A distributed collaboration in ArcGIS Enterprise is designed to operate between two organizations only.
Therefore, to collaborate with two separate ArcGIS Online organizations, the administrator must create separate collaborations between the Enterprise org and each ArcGIS Online org.
From Esri documentation:
"Each collaboration is established between two organizations. To collaborate with multiple organizations, you must set up multiple one-to-one collaborations."
* Option B is incorrect because adding external users from other orgs to a group doesn't extend collaboration capabilities.
