NEW QUESTION # 152
Your configuration parameters for a Source connector and Connect worker are:
* offset.flush.interval.ms=60000
* offset.flush.timeout.ms=500
* offset.storage.topic=connect-offsets
* offset.storage.replication.factor=-1 Which four statements match the expected behavior?(Select four.)

- A. The offsets topic will use the broker default replication factor.
- B. The connector will wait 60000ms before trying to commit offsets for tasks.
- C. The connector will commit offsets to a topic called connect-offsets.

- D. The connector will wait 500ms for offset data to be committed.

Answer: A,B,C,D

Explanation:
Each of these settings plays a key role inKafka Connect offset management:
* offset.flush.interval.ms=60000 # Offset commits happen every 60 seconds.
* offset.flush.timeout.ms=500 # The flush operation times out if it takes more than 500 ms.
* offset.storage.topic=connect-offsets # This is the internal topic for storing source offsets.
* offset.storage.replication.factor=-1 # This uses thebroker's default replication factor(commonly set via default.replication.factor).
FromKafka Connect Docs:
"If offset.storage.replication.factor=-1, the value will be determined by the broker's default replication factor." Reference:Kafka Connect Worker Configuration

- C. All messages from a failed transaction will be deleted from a Kafka topic.
- D. Information about producers and their transactions is stored in the _transaction_state topic.
- E. Transactions are only possible when writing messages to a topic with single partition.

Answer: A,D

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:
* #C. Consumers can consume both committed and uncommitted transactions.By default,Kafka consumers only read committed messagesif they are configured with isolation.level=read_committed.
However, if configured as read_uncommitted, theycan also consume uncommitted (potentially aborted) transactional messages.
From Kafka Documentation:
"The isolation.level setting controls whether the consumer will read only committed messages or all messages, including uncommitted messages from ongoing or aborted transactions."
* #D. Information about producers and their transactions is stored in the _transaction_state topic.
Kafka uses an internal topic named__transaction_stateto maintain metadata about producer transactions. This topic is essential for tracking thetransaction lifecycle, fencing, and recovery.
From Kafka Internals:
"Kafka stores the state of active and completed transactions in an internal topic called __transaction_state."
