NEW QUESTION # 261

Which of the following activities is most appropriate in the implementation of a lean production strategy?

- A. Implementing batch type operations
- B. Implementing manufacturing cells
- C. Implementing a push strategy
- D. Increasing service through inventory

Answer: B

Explanation:

Lean production strategy aims to minimize waste and maximize efficiency. The most appropriate activity in this context is implementing manufacturing cells:

* Manufacturing Cells: This involves organizing production processes into small, flexible cells that can produce a variety of products efficiently. It reduces waste, improves workflow, and enhances flexibility.

* Push vs. Pull: Lean strategies typically involve a pull strategy rather than a push strategy.

* Inventory Levels: Lean production focuses on reducing excess inventory, contrary to increasing service through inventory.

* Batch Type Operations: These can lead to higher inventory levels and are generally not aligned with lean principles.

NEW QUESTION # 262

Which of the following supply chain areas utilize order management cost metrics?

- A. Inspection
- B. Distribution
- C. Commodity management

- D. inbound freight

Answer: B

Explanation:

Order management cost metrics are used to measure the efficiency and effectiveness of order processing and fulfillment activities. These metrics often include costs related to order entry, order processing, order picking, packing, and shipping, and customer delivery. Distribution is a key area in the supply chain where these metrics are crucial, as it involves the actual handling and movement of goods from the manufacturer to the end customer. This includes warehousing, inventory management, transportation, and delivery activities. Tracking these costs helps organizations optimize their distribution processes and reduce operational expenses.
