NEW QUESTION # 43

As part of the hardware model normalization process, the Content Library automatically populates your inventory with what non-discoverable asset metadata?

- A. Manufacturer part number
- B. Manufacturer lifecycle dates
- C. Manufacturer comparables
- D. Manufacturer price

Answer: B

Explanation:

According to the Hardware Asset Management documentation, the hardware model normalization process is a process of comparing the model data in the ServiceNow platform with the data from the Content Library, which is a cloud-based service that provides normalized and enriched hardware model data.

The Content Library automatically populates your inventory with non-discoverable asset metadata, which are the data that cannot be obtained from discovery tools or manual entry, such as manufacturer name, model name, model number, and product lifecycle information¹.

The product lifecycle information includes the manufacturer lifecycle dates, which are the dates when the manufacturer stops selling, supporting, or servicing a hardware product¹.

The manufacturer lifecycle dates are important for hardware asset management, as they help customers plan for hardware refreshes based on end-of-life (EOL) and end-of-service (EOS) dates².

Therefore, the correct answer is option C, manufacturer lifecycle dates, as they are the non-discoverable asset metadata that the Content Library automatically populates your inventory with as part of the hardware model normalization process. References:
