NEW QUESTION # 84
The programme is in the 'evaluate new information' process at the end of Tranche 2. A new supplier has been identified that may be able to develop the next generation smart meters. This would be an alternative to developing them internally as part of the Research and Development Project and it could be faster and cheaper.
Which role should be responsible for evaluating this new information?

- A. Programme manager
- B. Programme office lead
- C. Business change manager
- D. Senior responsible owner

Answer: A

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed 200 to 250 words of Explanation From Exact Extract of project- programme-and-portfolio-management of 5th Edition MSP:
The 'Evaluate new information' process occurs at the end of each tranche (and continuously throughout) to assess whether the programme remains viable and aligned with its objectives. This process involves reviewing performance, risks, and external opportunities that could impact the business case or the target operating model.
In MSP 5th Edition, the Programme Manager is responsible for the setup and day-to-day management of the programme, which includes the analysis of factors that might require a change in direction. Option B is correct because the Programme Manager is tasked with evaluating the impact of such new information-in this case, a new supplier offering a faster, cheaper alternative-on the overall programme plan and the project delivery schedule. The Programme Manager performs the detailed analysis and then presents the findings and recommendations to the Senior Responsible Owner (SRO) for a final decision. While the SRO is the ultimate decision-maker, the responsibility for the evaluation of technical and management information resides with the Programme Manager. They must determine how this new "imported" solution affects dependencies, costs, and the realization of benefits before the SRO decides whether to pivot the strategy for Tranche 3.
