Cloud Security Alliance Certificate of Cloud Security Knowledge v5 (CCSKv5.0) Sample Questions (Q335-Q340):

NEW QUESTION # 335
Which of the following best describes the primary function of Cloud Detection and Response (CDR) in cybersecurity?

- A. Optimize cloud storage performance
- B. Detect and respond to security threats in the cloud
- C. Provide cost management for cloud services
- D. Manage cloud-based applications

Answer: B

Explanation:
Cloud Detection and Response (CDR) is an emerging capability that focuses specifically on detecting and responding to threats in cloud environments. While not deeply detailed in the core CSA Security Guidance v4.0, CDR is an evolution of traditional SIEM and endpoint detection strategies applied to cloud-native infrastructures.
In CSA Security Guidance v4.0 - Domain 9: Incident Response, it's made clear that:
"Security monitoring and detection capabilities in the cloud must be able to identify suspicious behavior, policy violations, and misconfigurations - often across multiple layers such as infrastructure, applications, and identity."
- CSA Security Guidance v4.0, Domain 9: Incident Response
CDR platforms typically include:
Threat detection across cloud workloads (e.g., compute, storage, IAM misuse) Real-time alerts Automated or manual response mechanisms Integration with cloud-native logging services like AWS CloudTrail, Azure Monitor, or GCP Audit Logs Incorrect options:
B is about application management, not threat detection.
C relates to cloud cost optimization tools.
D refers to cloud storage tuning, unrelated to threat detection.

- A. Converged Networking
- B. VLANS
- C. Software defined networking
- D. Traditional Networking

Answer: C

Explanation:
Software Defined Networking(SDN):A more complete abstraction layer on top of networking hardware, SDNs decouple the network control plane from the data plane(you can read more on SDN principles at this Wikipedia entry).This allows us to abstract networking from the traditional limitations of a LAN.
