Peoplecert ITIL 4 Specialist: High-Velocity IT Sample Questions (Q41-Q46):

NEW QUESTION # 41

An organization sells products which have rapidly-changing features and functionality. The organization has always taken a traditional approach to development and deployment, aiming to deliver products with full functionality after extensive requirements analysis. The organization's sales and revenues have recently decreased.

Which technique would be MOST BENEFICIAL for the organization to adopt?

- A. Minimum viable products
- B. A/B testing
- C. Cost of delay
- D. Return on Investment (ROI)

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 42

An organization wants to be able to understand the internal state of its digital services from the data they emit, including logs, metrics, and traces, so that unexpected behaviour can be investigated without deploying new code.

Which characteristic is being developed?

- A. Interoperability
- B. Observability
- C. Modularity
- D. Portability

Answer: B

Explanation:

Observability is the ability to infer the internal state of a system from its external outputs. Rich telemetry allows teams to answer questions that were not anticipated when the system was designed, which is essential for diagnosing complex distributed services and maintaining resilient operations.

NEW QUESTION # 43

An organization has integrated security requirements, controls, and automated security testing directly into the work of its development and operations teams, rather than treating security as a separate gate at the end.

Which approach does this describe?

- A. Site reliability engineering
- B. Value stream mapping
- C. DevSecOps
- D. Lean startup

Answer: C

Explanation:

DevSecOps extends DevOps by making security a shared responsibility across the entire value stream. Embedding automated security checks and expertise into everyday work means that conformance is assured continuously without introducing the delays associated with late-stage security reviews.

NEW QUESTION # 44

An organization has introduced software engineering practices such as continuous integration and continuous delivery in order to accelerate the delivery of its innovative new products and services. The organization needs to balance these new ways of working and continued compliance with internal and external policies.

Which practice would MOST help the organization to achieve this?

- A. Risk management
- B. Service validation and testing
- C. Problem management
- D. Monitoring and event management

Answer: A

Explanation:

Risk management would most help the organization balance accelerated delivery (through CI/CD) with compliance, as it ensures that risks related to internal and external policies are identified, assessed, and controlled while enabling innovation.

NEW QUESTION # 45

An organization wants to ensure that critical digital services can be restored following a major disruption such as a data centre loss. Which practice is MOST relevant?

- A. Business analysis
- B. Relationship management
- C. Service design
- D. Service continuity management

Answer: D

Explanation:

Service continuity management ensures that service availability and performance are maintained at a sufficient level in the event of a disaster. It defines recovery objectives, plans, and regular testing of recovery capability, complementing everyday availability and resilience measures.
