Implementation of Security Controls (16%):

- Implement the Chosen Security Control – This requires competence in coordinating inherited control implementation with the use of the common control providers and authenticating that security controls are constant with the enterprise architect. The interested individuals should also have the skills in determining the mandatory configuration settings and authenticating implementation as well as determining the compensating security controls;
- Security Control Implementation Documentation – You need competence in capturing planned inputs, expected outputs, and expected behavior of security controls as well as validating documented details aligned with the purpose, impact, and scope of the information system. It is important to be able to acquire implementation information from the relevant organization entities.

Target Audience and Prerequisites

The CAP Certification is intended for the information security, information technology, and information assurance professionals looking to validate their knowledge of RMF. These are the specialists seeking to demonstrate their advanced knowledge as well as technical abilities to formalize the processes required for assessing risk and establishing security documentation.

The potential candidates must possess at least two years of cumulative work experience in a minimum of one of the seven domains of the Certified Authorized Professional Common Book of Knowledge. Those who do not have the prerequisite experience can pass the CAP exam and become an Associate of (ISC)2 to gain some work experience.
