Which of the following indicates a susceptibility whereby an attacker can take advantage of the trust relationship between the client and the server?

- A. Line 17
- B. Line 10
- C. Line 06
- D. Line 13

Answer: C

Explanation:
The scan output in line 06 indicates that OCSP Must-Staple is not supported. This vulnerability exposes the application to attacks where an attacker can exploit the trust relationship between the client and the server by forging certificate revocation statuses. When OCSP stapling is not enforced, a client cannot reliably check if a certificate has been revoked, potentially allowing attackers to exploit this gap. CASP+ discusses the importance of certificate validation mechanisms such as OCSP (Online Certificate Status Protocol) to prevent man-in-the-middle and trust-exploiting attacks.

- A. Disable administrator accounts
- B. Enable SELinux
- C. Enforce network segmentation
- D. Assign static IP addresses

Answer: C

Explanation:
Network segmentation is a method to isolate environments from one another, thus limiting the scope of a potential attack. For IoT systems that cannot be updated or patched, network segmentation is the best mitigation technique. It would contain any compromise to the segmented network and prevent it from affecting the rest of the network infrastructure.
