NEW QUESTION # 186

Which two operations affect the number of times a trigger can fire?

Choose 2 answers

- A. After-save record-triggered flow
- B. Criteria-based sharing calculations
- C. Roll-up summary fields
- D. Email messages

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Option A: After-save record-triggered flow

True.

An after-save record-triggered flow can update records after they are saved.

If the flow updates a record that the trigger is listening to, it can cause the trigger to fire again, affecting the number of times it executes.

Reference:

Option D: Roll-up summary fields

True.

Changes in child records can cause roll-up summary fields to recalculate, which updates the parent record.

This update can cause triggers on the parent object to fire, potentially multiple times within a transaction.

Option B: Criteria-based sharing calculations

False.

Criteria-based sharing recalculations do not invoke triggers.

Sharing rules are processed after triggers and workflows, without affecting trigger execution.

Option C: Email messages

False.

Sending email messages does not impact the number of times a trigger fires.

Triggers are not directly affected by email operations unless the email action updates records that the trigger listens to.

Conclusion:

Operations A and D can affect the number of times a trigger fires due to record updates and recalculations.
