dbt Labs dbt Analytics Engineering Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q119-Q124):

NEW QUESTION # 119

(Multiple Select)

- A. There's an urgent request to update a single dashboard, and you know the exact subset of models to re-run.
- B. A critical upstream data source has been delayed, and you only want to refresh dependent models once the data arrives.
- C. You've refactored a core model and need to quickly validate its output and downstream dependencies.
- D. You need to temporarily disable a computationally expensive model that isn't critical for daily reporting.

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

Each involves a need for targeted, not blanket, execution. D is more about configuration than selective runs.

NEW QUESTION # 120

You accidentally pushed a large file containing sensitive data to a public remote repository. What immediate actions should you take?

- A. Both B and C.
- B. Permanently remove the sensitive file from Git history using tools like `git filter-branch`.
- C. Use `git reset -hard` to revert the commit and remove the file locally.
- D. Contact the repository hosting service for assistance.

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

B: You must ensure the sensitive data is completely removed from the history of the repository. C: The hosting service might have additional security measures or be able to assist in preventing the sensitive data from being accessed.

NEW QUESTION # 121

You want to automatically deploy updates to your documentation site hosted on a cloud service whenever changes to your dbt project are committed to your main branch. Which of the following is essential for this setup?

- A. Implementing a CI/CD pipeline that includes dbt build steps.
- B. Enabling webhooks in your Git repository provider.
- C. Write a custom script to check for project changes and handle deployment.
- D. Configuring dbt Cloud to trigger documentation deploys.

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

A). A CI/CD pipeline is needed to automate running dbt commands and the deployment process. B: Webhooks allow your CI/CD system to get notified when changes are pushed to your repository, triggering the pipeline. D: A custom script could provide flexibility for check conditions and deployment logic.

NEW QUESTION # 122

Your dbt project contains a series of interlinked models (A, B, C, D) where some models have downstream dependencies on upstream models. While running dbt run, model C fails due to a data validation test you added. Which of the following statements are potentially true?

- A. The failure of Model C triggers an automatic rollback of Model A and Model B.
- B. Model A and Model B are unaffected and have the most up-to-date data.
- C. Model D cannot be built until the issue with Model C is resolved.
- D. Model C has stale data but can still be queried.

Answer: B,C,D

Explanation:

A is true because upstream models that successfully complete are unaffected by downstream failures. B is true due to the dependency structure of the DAG. Model D cannot be created if its prerequisite, Model C, fails. C is false. dbt models don't automatically roll back upon failure unless you explicitly program this. D is true. Even though the model wasn't created successfully, the prior version (if it existed) remains in the warehouse

NEW QUESTION # 123

(Multiple Select)

- A. Write a custom Python script to parse dbt models.
- B. `ref()` and `source()` functions
- C. Jinja templating
- D. Inspect the `manifest.json` file.
- E. Manually examine the compiled SQL files.
- F. `dbt test`
- G. `dbt docs`
- H. Use the `dbt debug` command.
- I. Snapshots

Answer: B,C,G

Explanation:

The `manifest.json` file, generated by `dbt compile`, contains comprehensive metadata about your project, including a detailed breakdown of model dependencies.
