What is the primary purpose of backing up the endpoint configuration prior to replacing the device?

- A. Torestore settings on the new device after replacement
- B. To troubleshoot network connectivity issues
- C. To generate a performance report for the old device
- D. To update the firmware of the device

Answer: A

Explanation:
Backing up the configuration of a network device before replacement is a critical step to ensure business continuity and minimize downtime. The primary purpose of this backup is torestore the existing settings onto the new device, ensuring that it operates identically to the one being replaced.
This process includes preserving interface configurations, routing protocols, access control lists, and other essential parameters. By restoring the backed-up configuration to the new device, network administrators can quickly reintegrate it into the network infrastructure without the need for manual reconfiguration, thereby reducing the risk of errors and service disruptions.
Options A, B, and C do not align with the primary objective of configuration backups in the context of device replacement.

NEW QUESTION # 101

Why is it important to verify the update status after the initial upgrade process when upgrading firmware on a Cisco UCS C-Series server using the Host Upgrade Utility?

- A. To activate the new licenses associated with the firmware
- B. To generate a report for compliance documentation
- C. To ensure compatibility with third-party applications
- D. To confirm that all intended components were successfully updated

Answer: D

Explanation:
After upgrading the firmware on a Cisco UCS C-Series server using the Host Upgrade Utility (HUU), it is critical to verify the update status to ensure that all targeted components (such as BIOS, CIMC, and RAID controller firmware) have been successfully updated.
Firmware upgrades often involve multiple subsystems, and partial or failed updates can result in inconsistencies or even device instability. Verifying the update status allows the technician to identify any missed components and perform corrective actions if necessary.
Options like generating compliance reports, third-party application checks, or license activations are not the primary reasons for this verification step in the HUU process.
