- A. Properly react to disasters
- B. Compliance with regulations
- C. The continuation of a company
- D. To increase liability

Answer: C

Explanation:

The primary reason for developing and implementing a business continuity plan is to ensure the continuation of a company's critical functions and processes in the face of a disruption that may otherwise cause severe losses or damage to the company's reputation, assets, customers, or stakeholders. A business continuity plan can help a company to resume operations as quickly as possible after a disruption, minimize the impact on its performance and profitability, protect its brand and image, and fulfill its legal and contractual obligations.

A formal "disaster" can only be declared by the firm owners or by the IT Department Manager.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: B

Explanation:

A formal "disaster" can only be declared by the firm owners or by the IT Department Manager. This is false because a formal "disaster" can be declared by any authorized person who has the responsibility and authority to activate the business continuity and disaster recovery plan. The authorized person may vary depending on the type, scope, and severity of the disaster, but it should be clearly defined in the plan who can declare a disaster and under what circumstances. The authorized person should also communicate the declaration of a disaster to all relevant stakeholders, such as employees, customers, suppliers, partners, regulators, media, or the public.
