Answer: A

Explanation:

"Kubernetes is not correctly reporting its storage usage." The NCC checks run on the nodes in the cluster and may report storage usage differently based on how they are being executed. Additionally, the administrator notes that the Kubernetes pod reports that the usage is 55% used disk space, which is different than what the NCC checks report.

One possible cause of this discrepancy is that Kubernetes is not correctly reporting its storage usage. It is recommended that the administrator checks the Kubernetes storage configuration to ensure it is set up correctly and that Kubernetes is able to accurately report the storage usage. It may also be necessary to update or reinstall Kubernetes if there are any issues with the installation. Nutanix Objects is a software-defined object storage solution that provides scalable and secure data storage for unstructured data. MSP is responsible for routing requests from clients to Objects clusters and providing load balancing and high availability. To update MSP, you need to perform an LCM inventory and select MSP from the software updates list.
