NEW QUESTION # 166

At Universal Containers, each admin and developer use a separate developer pro sandbox. Configuration and code are then migrated to a partial data sandbox for combination and initial testing. Once approved the configuration and code are then migrated to a full sandbox for final load and regression testing before going to production.

When should the full sandbox be refreshed?

- A. After user acceptance testing is complete.
- B. After a new user is added to production.
- C. After each major release to production.
- D. After each push from the partial data sandbox.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

The full sandbox should be refreshed after each major release to production. This way, the full sandbox will have the most updated data and metadata from the production org, and can be used for final load and regression testing before the next release. Option A is incorrect because refreshing the full sandbox after user acceptance testing is complete is not necessary, as user acceptance testing can be done in the partial data sandbox or the production org. Option B is incorrect because refreshing the full sandbox after each push from the partial data sandbox is not necessary, as the full sandbox can receive configuration and code changes from the partial data sandbox without refreshing. Option D is incorrect because refreshing the full sandbox after a new user is added to production is not necessary, as adding a new user does not affect the data and metadata in the full sandbox.
