Relevant records are a feature in App Studio that can help facilitate this process. Which two of the following options outline the benefits of relevant records? (Choose Two)

- A. Users can achieve efficient resource management by promoting a rule from a built-on application, which enables its reuse in another class.
- B. Relevant records regulate design-time prompting and filtering across various areas of App Studio, which reduces the time spent searching through unrelated records in cases.
- C. Users can promote instances from a built-on application for reuse in another application for effective data or case instance management.
- D. Relevant records control the run-time availability of rules, which consequently decreases the time consumed during the rule performance.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

Relevant records in Pega's App Studio, as described in Pega Academy's Application Design Mission and the Pega Certified Lead System Architect Study Guide, simplify low-code development by guiding citizen developers to appropriate rules and enabling reuse, enhancing productivity and efficiency.

* Option A (Incorrect): Relevant records do not control run-time rule availability or directly impact rule performance. They are a design-time feature for guiding developers, per the App Studio Features module.

* Option B (Correct): Relevant records regulate design-time prompting and filtering in App Studio, reducing the time spent searching for unrelated records by presenting contextually appropriate options.

This is a key benefit for citizen developers, as documented in the Relevant Records section of Pega Community.

* Option C (Correct): Promoting rules from a built-on application via relevant records enables reuse in other classes, improving resource management and modularity. This supports low-code reuse, per the Rule Promotion guidelines.

* Option D (Incorrect): Promoting data or case instances is not a function of relevant records. Relevant records focus on rule reuse, not instance management, as noted in the App Studio Configuration module.

Pega Academy: Application Design Mission (covers relevant records).

Pega Community: Relevant Records (details on design-time benefits).

Pega Certified Lead System Architect Study Guide (v23): Section on Application Design (emphasizes low-code features).
