NEW QUESTION # 20

What type of data would be most useful in the formative evaluation of a long-standing group for adolescents on probation?

- A. longitudinal data on recidivism and high school or GED completion post-group
- B. focus group data of clients' most meaningful experiences in the group
- C. descriptive data of client characteristics and needs for targeted recruitment

Answer: C

Explanation:

Formative evaluation is designed to collect information that can be used to improve a program while it is still ongoing. Descriptive data on client characteristics and needs are crucial for making adjustments in recruitment and group structure, and ensuring the group is meeting the needs of its target population.

Summative evaluation, in contrast, would use outcome data (such as recidivism or graduation rates) after the program has been implemented.

A depressed client repeatedly discusses in detail what the client believes to be wrong with the world. Which of the following would be most helpful for them?

- A. precision attending
- B. conflict resolution practice
- C. intentional non-attending

Answer: C

Explanation:

Intentional non-attending is a counseling skill in which the counselor deliberately shifts focus away from unproductive or repetitive content (such as ongoing complaints) to encourage movement toward more constructive discussion. This technique can help break the cycle of rumination in depressed clients.

NEW QUESTION # 23

Which is most accurate in how social media impacts counseling relationships?

- A. The use of social media in counseling should be avoided as an ethical imperative.
- B. Clients can feel empowered in ways that traditional face-to-face interactions cannot achieve.
- C. The convenience and accessibility of social media outweighs negative effects.

Answer: B

While there are ethical considerations and potential pitfalls, social media and technology can empower clients by providing access, flexibility, and new forms of engagement not possible in traditional settings.
