Tip 4

CCSK has an online open book multiple choice exam. Having an open book sounds easy, until you realize that the level of the questions is adapted to that. You will have about 90 seconds per question. That is not enough to look up all questions. So you need a tactic and a procedure to get the best results in the given time. There just is not enough time to think what you should be addressing next. You need an algorithm to follow, but luckily I have a proven one I can show you.

Sample Questions (Q278-Q283):

NEW QUESTION # 278

In the context of incident response, which phase involves alerts validation to reduce false positives and estimates the incident's scope?

- A. Containment, Eradication, & Recovery
- B. Preparation
- C. Post-Incident Analysis
- D. Detection & Analysis

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Detection & Analysis phase of incident response involves the validation of alerts to reduce false positives and estimating the scope of the incident. During this phase, security teams assess whether the alerts indicate an actual incident, investigate the nature and severity of the threat, and determine the affected systems, data, and potential impact. This phase is critical for accurately identifying the scope of the issue and ensuring appropriate actions are taken in subsequent phases, such as containment and eradication.
