NEW QUESTION # 15

is the ability of a system or component to perform its required functions under stated conditions for a specified period of time.

- A. Scalability
- B. Reliability
- C. Availability
- D. Agility

Answer: B

Explanation:
According to the IEEE definition, reliability is the ability of a system or component to perform its required functions under stated conditions for a specified period of time. Reliability is a measure of how often a system or component fails, and how long it takes to recover from a failure. Reliability is closely related to availability, which is the degree to which a system or component is operational and accessible when required for use.
Reliability and availability are both affected by factors such as design, maintenance, testing, and environmental conditions.

NEW QUESTION # 16
What is the recommended level of Common Mode Noise (CMN)?

- A. > 5 Volt measured at the rack level
- B. Preferred to be < 1 Volt with a maximum of 3 Volt
- C. CMN has r>o effect on ICT equipment so any level is ok
- D. > 10 Volt measured at the rack level

Answer: B

Explanation:
As per Certified Data Centre Professional (CDCP) reference materials, Common Mode Noise (CMN) is a type of electrical noise that appears equally on the line and neutral wires with respect to ground, and it can negatively affect sensitive ICT equipment.
Excessive CMN at the rack level can lead to data errors, communication problems, equipment malfunctions, or even hardware damage.
The CDCP training and the official exam preparation guide specify that the preferred level of Common Mode Noise at the rack should be less than 1 Volt, and under no circumstances should it exceed 3 Volts.
Keeping CMN at these levels helps ensure the stable and reliable operation of critical data center infrastructure. Higher CMN levels indicate grounding or bonding issues, or possibly interference from electrical or mechanical sources, and must be addressed promptly.

Options A and B (CMN above 5 or 10 Volts) are not acceptable and would present a serious risk to ICT equipment operation and data integrity. Option D is incorrect, as CMN absolutely does affect ICT equipment.

- A. Yes, data centre downtime can result in business downtime.
- B. No, unplanned data centre downtime is already financially planned for in the yearly budget planning process.
- C. Yes, but data centre downtime only impacts the airline industry.
- D. No, because data centres operate independently from the business.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Data centres are essential for supporting the IT operations and applications of various businesses across different industries. Data centre downtime can have a negative impact on the business results, such as loss of revenue, customer satisfaction, productivity, reputation, and competitive advantage. According to a web search, the average cost of data centre downtime in 2020 was $8,851 per minute, and the average duration of a data centre outage was 95 minutes1. This means that a typical data centre outage could cost a business over $840,000 in direct and indirect losses1. Therefore, data centre downtime can have a significant impact on the business results, regardless of the industry or sector.

NEW QUESTION # 18

What is the purpose of a service corridor?

- A. It provides a safe, vented and secure area where standby generators can operate safely.
- B. It is a generic name for pathways leading to other rooms that contains facility supporting equipment like the UPS room, battery room, generator room etc.
- C. It provides a secure area where supporting facilities can be serviced and monitored on a 24x7 basis without disturbing the computer room.
- D. To create a secure and conditioned environment where media can be stored in a controlled manner.

Answer: C

Explanation:
A service corridor is a dedicated space within or adjacent to a data centre that allows access to the supporting facilities, such as power, cooling, fire suppression, security, and cabling systems, without interfering with the computer room operations. A service corridor helps to isolate the noise, vibration, heat, and dust generated by the supporting facilities from the sensitive equipment in the computer room. A service corridor also enhances the safety and efficiency of the maintenance and monitoring activities, as well as the flexibility and scalability of the data centre design.
