EXIN EPI Certified Data Centre Specialist Sample Questions (Q81-Q86):

NEW QUESTION # 81

Three data centers are benchmarked on facilities energy efficiency.

Data center A has achieved a PUE of 2.45.

Data center B has achieved a PUE of 1.20.

Data center C has achieved a PUE of 1.90.

Which of the data centers is operating at the highest facility efficiency?

- A. PUE does not indicate efficiency
- B. Data center C
- C. Data center A
- D. Data center B

Answer: C

Explanation:

A Power Usage Effectiveness (PUE) of 1.20 (achieved by Data Center B) indicates the highest facility efficiency among the three data centers. A lower PUE value signifies better energy efficiency, as it means that a greater proportion of the total energy consumed is used directly for IT equipment rather than for cooling, lighting, or other facility needs.

Detailed Explanation:

PUE is calculated as the ratio of total facility energy to IT equipment energy. A PUE close to 1.0 suggests that almost all the energy is dedicated to computing processes, with minimal overhead. With PUE values of 2.45, 1.20, and 1.90, Data Center B (1.20) operates most efficiently by devoting a higher percentage of its total energy to IT equipment.

EPI Data Center Specialist References:

The EPI curriculum emphasizes PUE as a key metric for data center efficiency, with lower values representing better performance. Achieving a PUE near 1.0 aligns with industry best practices for energy- efficient data center design and operation.

NEW QUESTION # 82

A computer room with a raised floor has been designed with racks in a hot/cold aisle setup.

What should you recommend for the placement of down-flow air conditioners?

- A. Air conditioners should always be placed at both sides of each row of racks
- B. Air conditioner placement has no influence on cooling effectiveness and efficiency. Hence, they can be placed at any convenient location.
- C. Air conditioners perpendicular to (at the end of the row of) the Hot-Aisle
- D. Air conditioners perpendicular to (at the end of the row of) the Cold-Aisle

Answer: D

Explanation:

In a hot/cold aisle configuration, placing down-flow air conditioners perpendicular to the cold aisle ensures that cool air is directed efficiently into the cold aisles where server intakes are located. This layout allows for optimal cooling performance by aligning the airflow directly with the equipment intakes, minimizing hot spots and enhancing cooling efficiency.

Detailed Explanation:

With a raised floor design, cold air from the air conditioners is supplied into the cold aisle, where server intakes are located. Positioning the air conditioning units perpendicular to the cold aisles ensures that cool air is delivered directly into these aisles, preventing air mixing and optimizing cooling. This setup takes full advantage of the airflow management strategy inherent to the hot/cold aisle configuration.

EPI Data Center Specialist References:

EPI guidelines on cooling emphasize that down-flow air conditioners should be positioned to maximize the effectiveness of cold aisle delivery, which improves cooling efficiency and helps maintain consistent temperatures across server racks.

NEW QUESTION # 83

What is the focus of the Open Compute Project (OCP)?

- A. Standardizing equipment only for hyperscale data centers
- B. Making cloud computing more accessible
- C. Saving energy, materials, and costs
- D. Developing an open-source operating system

Answer: C

Explanation:

The Open Compute Project (OCP), initiated by Facebook in 2011, focuses on open designs for servers, storage, racks, and power systems. The goals are:

- * Reduce energy consumption by using efficient hardware.
- * Save materials by eliminating unnecessary components.
- * Lower costs by standardizing and sharing open designs.

Option B is wrong-OCP hardware can be adopted by enterprises as well. Option C is unrelated (OCP is hardware, not OS).

Option D is broader cloud adoption, not OCP's direct mission.

Thus, the primary focus is energy, material, and cost savings through open-source hardware.

NEW QUESTION # 84

What is a disadvantage of hypoxic-based fire suppression?

- A. Only usable with positive pressure rooms
- B. Only usable in rooms with sufficient air changes
- C. Only usable in non-occupied areas
- D. Gas containers must be close to hazard

Answer: C

Explanation:

Hypoxic systems continuously lower oxygen concentration (~15%) to prevent combustion. While safe for short-term human exposure, standards like ISO 20338 recommend they are not suitable for continuously occupied spaces, because reduced oxygen may cause fatigue, reduced cognition, and health risks for staff.

* B is irrelevant-air change rates affect dilution, not feasibility.

* C is incorrect-tanks can be remote.

* D is false-positive pressure is not required.

Thus, the main disadvantage is restriction to non-continuous occupancy.

References: ISO 20338 (Oxygen Reduction Systems), NFPA 770.

NEW QUESTION # 85

What is a potential disadvantage of using water mist as a fire extinguishing system?

- A. It extracts oxygen from the air creating a potential risk for humans inside the computer room
- B. It has droplets that are too small (100-120 microns) so it can only be used for small fires
- C. It will rapidly increase the humidity level in the data center, which can cause a potential risk for the operation of the equipment
- D. It only uses 10% of the water normally used in a water-based fire suppression, which might not be enough to suppress the fire

Answer: C

Explanation:

A potential disadvantage of using a water mist fire suppression system is that it can rapidly increase the humidity within the data center, which may pose risks to sensitive electronic equipment. Excessive humidity can lead to condensation, which could damage electronics and lead to short circuits or corrosion over time.

Detailed Explanation:

Water mist systems use fine droplets to suppress fires by cooling and displacing heat. However, the moisture generated may raise the humidity level to the point where it exceeds safe operational limits for IT equipment. Therefore, while water mist systems are effective in fire suppression, they may not be ideal in environments where high humidity could damage sensitive equipment.

EPI Data Center Specialist References:

EPI guidelines advise considering the impact of humidity from fire suppression systems, particularly in environments housing electronic equipment. It's essential to weigh the benefits of fire suppression against potential risks to operational equipment when choosing suppression methods.
