NEW QUESTION # 156

Which of the following technologies BEST facilitates protection of personal data?

- A. Data discovery and mapping tools
- B. Data profiling tools
- C. Data loss prevention (DLP) tools
- D. Data log file monitoring tools

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

Data loss prevention (DLP) tools are technologies that help to prevent unauthorized access, use, or transfer of personal data. DLP tools can monitor, detect, and block data leakage or exfiltration from various sources, such as endpoints, networks, cloud services, or email. DLP tools can also enforce data protection policies and compliance requirements, such as encryption, masking, or deletion of sensitive data. DLP tools can help to protect personal data from both internal and external threats, such as malicious insiders, hackers, or accidental exposure.

NEW QUESTION # 160

Which of the following scenarios should trigger the completion of a privacy impact assessment (PIA)?

- A. Updates to the enterprise data policy
- B. New data retention and backup policies
- C. New inter-organizational data flows
- D. Updates to data quality standards

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

A privacy impact assessment (PIA) is a process of analyzing the potential privacy risks and impacts of collecting, using, and disclosing personal data. A PIA should be conducted when there is a change in the data processing activities that may affect the privacy of individuals or the compliance with data protection laws and regulations. One of the scenarios that should trigger the completion of a PIA is when there are new inter-organizational data flows, which means that personal data is shared or transferred between different entities or jurisdictions. This may introduce new privacy risks, such as unauthorized access, misuse, or breach of data, as well as new legal obligations, such as obtaining consent, ensuring adequate safeguards, or notifying authorities.
