- B. Maximizing network complexity
- C. Enhancing hardware durability
- D. Increasing data latency

Answer: A

Explanation:

NEW QUESTION # 42

Your organization wants to be notified of an event as soon as it is triggered by an alert threshold. This notification should be sent to your ITSM and generate an incident so it can be responded to appropriately.

What kind of integration should you use?

- A. ServiceNow Integration
- B. DNA Center Integration
- C. Alerts API
- D. Custom Webhooks

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the Designing and Implementing Enterprise Network Assurance (300-445 ENNA) curriculum, the objective of modern network assurance is to bridge the gap between "visibility" and "action". When an organization requires an automated workflow to handle network performance anomalies, the most efficient architecture is the native ServiceNow Integration (Option A). This integration is categorized as a "Custom-Built" or native integration within the ThousandEyes platform, designed specifically to facilitate the delivery of direct notifications into a ServiceNow account.

According to the ENNA implementation standards, the ThousandEyes ServiceNow integration utilizes the ServiceNow Incident Management module. When a predefined alert rule (such as a 5% packet loss threshold on a critical SaaS path) is violated, ThousandEyes triggers an event and immediately pushes the alert data to ServiceNow via an OAuth-authenticated connection. Within ServiceNow, this data is used to automatically generate an incident, complete with relevant metadata such as the test name, agent location, and the specific metrics that triggered the violation. This automation eliminates the manual overhead of "copy-pasting" alert details from a monitoring dashboard into a ticketing system, thereby significantly reducing the Mean Time to Identification (MTTI).

While Custom Webhooks (Option C) can achieve a similar result by sending JSON payloads to a REST API, they require additional development effort to parse the data on the receiver side. The native ServiceNow integration provides a pre-configured template that maps ThousandEyes alert fields directly to ServiceNow incident fields, offering a "one-click" setup experience that is preferred for enterprise-grade deployments.

Options B and D are irrelevant for the specific goal of ITSM incident generation. Therefore, for direct ITSM notification and incident creation, the native ServiceNow Integration is the verified recommendation.
