- D. Delay before

Answer: A

The Type Into activity is used to send keystrokes to a UI element, such as a text box1. The activity has several properties that can be adjusted to achieve different behaviors and results1. One of these properties is the Activate property, which determines whether the specified UI element is brought to the foreground and activated before the text is written1. By default, this property is not selected, which means that the activity will type into the current active window1. However, if the property is selected, the activity will first make sure that the target UI element is visible and focused, and then type the text1.
