NEW QUESTION # 180

SCENARIO

Please use the following to answer the next QUESTION

Noah is trying to get a new job involving the management of money. He has a poor personal credit rating, but he has made better financial decisions in the past two years.

One potential employer, Arnie's Emporium, recently called to tell Noah he did not get a position. As part of the application process, Noah signed a consent form allowing the employer to request his credit report from a consumer reporting agency (CRA). Noah thinks that the report hurt his chances, but believes that he may not ever know whether it was his credit that cost him the job.

However, Noah is somewhat relieved that he was not offered this particular position. He noticed that the store where he interviewed was extremely disorganized. He imagines that his credit report could still be sitting in the office, unsecured.

Two days ago, Noah got another interview for a position at Sam's Market. The interviewer told Noah that his credit report would be a factor in the hiring decision. Noah was surprised because he had not seen anything on paper about this when he applied.

Regardless, the effect of Noah's credit on his employability troubles him, especially since he has tried so hard to improve it. Noah made his worst financial decisions fifteen years ago, and they led to bankruptcy. These were decisions he made as a young man, and most of his debt at the time consisted of student loans, credit card debt, and a few unpaid bills - all of which Noah is still working to pay off. He often laments that decisions he made fifteen years ago are still affecting him today.

In addition, Noah feels that an experience investing with a large bank may have contributed to his financial troubles. In 2007, in an effort to earn money to help pay off his debt, Noah talked to a customer service representative at a large investment company who urged him to purchase stocks. Without understanding the risks, Noah agreed. Unfortunately, Noah lost a great deal of money.

After losing the money, Noah was a customer of another financial institution that suffered a large security breach. Noah was one of millions of customers whose personal information was compromised. He wonders if he may have been a victim of identity theft and whether this may have negatively affected his credit.

Noah hopes that he will soon be able to put these challenges behind him, build excellent credit, and find the perfect job.

Based on the scenario, which legislation should ease Noah's worry about his credit report as a result of applying at Arnie's Emporium?

- A. The Privacy Rule under the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA).
- B. The Red Flags Rule under the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act (FACTA).
- C. The Safeguards Rule under the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA).
- D. The Disposal Rule under the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act (FACTA).

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 181

Which of the following is NOT a principle found in the APEC Privacy Framework?

- A. Access and Correction.
- B. Integrity of Personal Information.
- C. Privacy by Design.
- D. Preventing Harm.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 182

Which of the following statements is most accurate in regard to data breach notifications under federal and state laws:

- A. When you are required to provide an individual with notice of a data breach under any state's law, you must provide the individual with an offer for free credit monitoring.
- B. You must notify the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) in addition to affected individuals if over 500 individuals are receiving notice.
- C. When providing an individual with required notice of a data breach, you must identify what personal information was actually or likely compromised.
- D. The only obligations to provide data breach notification are under state law because currently there is no federal law or regulation requiring notice for the breach of personal information.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Data breach notification laws in the United States vary by state and territory, and there is no comprehensive federal law that applies to all types of personal information. Some federal laws, such as HIPAA, GLBA, and the FDIC rule, impose data breach notification requirements for specific industries or sectors, but they do not cover all types of personal information or all entities that collect, store, or process such information. Therefore, the only obligations to provide data breach notification for the breach of personal information are under state law, unless a specific federal law applies to the entity or the information involved.

NEW QUESTION # 184

A large online bookseller decides to contract with a vendor to manage Personal Information (PI). What is the least important factor for the company to consider when selecting the vendor?

- A. The vendor's employee training program
- B. The vendor's financial health
- C. The vendor's reputation
- D. The vendor's employee retention rates

Answer: D

Explanation:

While it is important for a company to consider the reputation and financial health of a vendor, as well as their employee training program, the retention rates of the vendor's employees are not a direct indicator of the vendor's ability to protect personal information. It is important for the company to ensure that the vendor has appropriate security measures in place to protect personal information, such as access controls, encryption, and data breach response procedures. The company should also consider the vendor's compliance with applicable privacy and data protection laws, as well as their experience working with sensitive personal information. Overall, while employee retention rates may indirectly reflect the quality of the vendor's services, they are not a direct factor in assessing the vendor's ability to manage personal information.
