Which of the following are defined for a given change model?

Choose 3 answers

- A. State transition conditions
- B. Phase model
- C. State model
- D. Phase transitions
- E. State transitions

Answer: B,C,E

Explanation:

Detailed Explanation:

In ServiceNow, a change model defines how a change progresses through its lifecycle. The state model refers to the predefined states (e.g., New, Assess, Authorize) a change can transition through. State transitions are the movement between these states. Similarly, a phase model represents the different phases of the change process (such as Request, Authorization, Implementation), which can have distinct requirements and actions.

Each of these components defines a clear structure and sequence of events for managing changes effectively.
