CompTIA A+ Certification Exam: Core 1 Sample Questions (Q311-Q316):

NEW QUESTION # 311

Which of the following cloud models would multiple organizations in the same industry most likely use?

- A. Hybrid
- B. Community
- C. Private
- D. Public

Answer: B

Explanation:

A Community Cloud is designed for use by several organizations with shared concerns (e.g., security, compliance, jurisdiction). It's common in industries like healthcare or finance where multiple entities benefit from a common infrastructure with shared policies.

* Option A (Public): Open to general public or large industry group - less secure.

* Option B (Hybrid): Mix of public and private - does not imply industry collaboration.

* Option D (Private): Dedicated to a single organization.

NEW QUESTION # 312

A technician needs to add storage to a workstation. The workstation does not have room to add any internal storage, so the technician plans to add an external storage device. Which of the following connection types should the technician MOST likely use?

- A. PCIe
- B. SCSI
- C. eSATA
- D. NVMe

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

eSATA is the best choice for adding external storage as it offers a fast transfer rate and is specifically designed for external storage devices. SCSI is an older interface that is rarely used today, PCIe is typically used to add expansion cards to a computer, and NVMe is a newer interface for high-speed solid-state storage, but it is typically used for internal storage devices.

NEW QUESTION # 314

Which of the following services checks whether the sender's IP address is associated with the sender's domain name when receiving email?

- A. MX
- B. SPF
- C. DMARC
- D. DKIM

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is C. SPF.

SPF stands for Sender Policy Framework, which is a protocol that allows domain owners to specify which IP addresses are authorized to send email on behalf of their domains¹. SPF helps prevent email spoofing and phishing by verifying the sender's identity and preventing unauthorized use of their domain name¹².

When an email is received, the receiving server checks the SPF record of the sender's domain, which is a DNS TXT record that lists the valid IP addresses for that domain¹². The server then compares the sender's IP address with the SPF record and determines if it matches or not. If it matches, the email passes the SPF check and is accepted; if it does not match, the email fails the SPF check and is rejected or marked as spam¹².

DKIM stands for DomainKeys Identified Mail, which is a protocol that allows domain owners to digitally sign their emails using a public-private key pair³. DKIM helps ensure the integrity and authenticity of email messages by verifying that they have not been tampered with or forged during transit³.

MX stands for Mail Exchange, which is a type of DNS record that specifies the mail servers that are responsible for receiving email for a domain. MX records help direct incoming email to the correct destination and prioritize them based on preference values.

DMARC stands for Domain-based Message Authentication, Reporting and Conformance, which is a protocol that builds on SPF and DKIM and allows domain owners to define how receivers should handle unauthenticated or suspicious emails from their domains. DMARC helps protect domains from email fraud and abuse by providing feedback and reports on email delivery and authentication status.

Therefore, SPF is the only service among the options that checks whether the sender's IP address is associated with the sender's domain name when receiving email.

NEW QUESTION # 315

A user with a self-configured, static IP address cannot connect to the internet. The technician runs an ipconfig command and receives the following output:

IPv4 Address.....192.168.1.20
Subnet Mask.....255.255.255.255
Default Gateway..192.168.1.1
DHCP Server.....192.168.1.1

Which of the following should the technician edit?

- A. DHCP server
- B. Default gateway
- C. IPv4 address
- D. Subnet mask

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

The correct answer is D. Default gateway.

A default gateway is the device that connects a local network to other networks, such as the internet. A default gateway is usually a router or a modem that has an IP address on the same subnet as the local network. A default gateway is necessary for a device to communicate with devices outside its local network.

In this case, the user has a self-configured, static IP address of 192.168.1.20, which belongs to the subnet 192.168.1.0/24 (with a subnet mask of 255.255.255.0). However, the default gateway is set to 192.168.0.1, which belongs to a different subnet (192.168.0.0/24). This means that the user's device cannot reach the default gateway, and therefore cannot connect to the internet.

The technician should edit the default gateway to match the correct subnet of the user's device, such as 192.168.1.1 or 192.168.1.254, depending on the configuration of the network.
