CompTIA Cloud+ Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q379-Q384):

NEW QUESTION # 379

A cloud administrator checked out the deployment scripts used to deploy the sandbox environment to a public cloud provider. The administrator modified the script to add an application load balancer in front of the web-based front-end application. The administrator next used the script to recreate a new sandbox environment successfully, and the application was then using the new load balancer.

The following week, a new update was required to add more front-end servers to the sandbox environment. A second administrator made the necessary changes and checked out the deployment scripts. The second administrator then ran the script, but the application load balancer was missing from the new deployment.

Which of the following is the MOST likely reason for this issue?

- A. The application load balancer exceeded the maximum number of servers it could use
- B. The new server images were incompatible with the application load-balancer configuration
- C. The deployment script changes made by the first administrator were not checked in and committed
- D. The license limit on the number of server deployments allowed per month was exceeded

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

Checking in and committing are actions that save and update the changes made to a file or code in a version control system or repository. Checking in and committing can help track and synchronize the changes made by different users or developers working on the same file or code. The deployment script changes made by the first administrator were not checked in and committed is the most likely reason for the issue of the application load balancer being missing from the new deployment after a second administrator made some changes and ran the script. If the first administrator did not check in and commit the changes made to add an application load balancer to the script, then those changes would not be reflected or available in the latest version of the script used by the second administrator. NEW QUESTION # 380

A systems administrator is deploying a GPU-accelerated VDI solution. Upon requests from several users, the administrator installs an older version of the OS on their virtual workstations. The majority of the VMs run the latest LTS version of the OS.

Which of the following types of drivers will MOST likely ensure compatibility with all virtual workstations?

- A. Legacy drivers
- B. The drivers from the OS repository
- C. The latest drivers from the vendor's website
- D. Alternative community drivers

Answer: B

Explanation:

The drivers from the OS repository are the drivers that are included or available in the official software repository or package manager of the operating system. The drivers from the OS repository are most likely to ensure compatibility with all virtual workstations that use a GPU-accelerated VDI solution, as they are tested and verified to work with different versions of the operating system and the hardware. The drivers from the OS repository can also provide stability and security, as they are regularly updated and patched by the operating system vendor or community. NEW QUESTION # 381

A cloud administrator is reviewing the authentication and authorization mechanism implemented within the cloud environment. Upon review, the administrator discovers the sales group is part of the finance group, and the sales team members can access the financial application. Single sign-on is also implemented, which makes access much easier.

Which of the following access control rules should be changed?

- A. Discretionary-based
- B. Role-based
- C. Mandatory-based
- D. Attribute-based

Answer: B

Explanation:

Role-based access control (RBAC) is a type of access control model that assigns permissions and privileges to users based on their roles or functions within an organization or system. RBAC can help simplify and streamline the management and enforcement of access policies, as it can reduce the complexity and redundancy of assigning permissions to individual users or groups. RBAC can also help improve security and compliance, as it can limit or grant access based on the principle of least privilege and the separation of duties. RBAC is the best access control rule to change when the sales group is part of the finance group and the sales team members can access the financial application due to a single sign-on mechanism being implem

NEW QUESTION # 382

Which of the following provides groups of compute units that can horizontally scale according to a workload?

- A. Cloud-reserved instances
- B. Autoscaling
- C. Orchestrated container environment

Answer: B

Explanation:

Cloud bursting

Explanation:

Autoscaling is a feature that allows groups of compute units to horizontally scale according to a workload or predefined rules.

Autoscaling can increase or decrease the number of compute units dynamically based on metrics such as CPU utilization, memory usage, network traffic, or user demand. Autoscaling can improve performance, availability, and cost-efficiency of cloud applications.

NEW QUESTION # 383

A systems administrator disabled TLS 1.0 and 1.1, as well as RC4, 3DES, and AES-128 ciphers for TLS 1.2, on a web server. A client now reports being unable to access the web server, but the administrator verifies that the server is online, the web service is running, and other users can reach the server as well.

Which of the following should the administrator recommend the user do FIRST?

- A. Update the web browser to the latest version
- B. Disable antivirus/anti-malware software
- C. Establish a VPN tunnel between the computer and the web server
- D. Turn off the software firewall

Answer: A

Explanation:

Updating the web browser to the latest version is the first action that the user should do when experiencing a connection timeout error after the administrator configured a redirect from HTTP to HTTPS on the web server.

Updating the web browser can ensure that it supports the latest security protocols and standards, such as TLS

1.2 or 1.3, which are required for HTTPS connections. If the web browser is outdated or incompatible with the security protocols or standards used by the web server, it may fail to establish a secure connection and result in a connection timeout error.
